"A matchless and unequalled primer for the novice, an invaluable reference source for the experienced scholar, and, indeed, the first book that anyone possessing even a slight interest in American legal history should read."

—The American Journal of Legal History

"A treasure for all Americans... This book lays a foundation for an active future of criticism and revision in American legal history, and the scholars of that future will stand indebted to Professor Friedman."

—Stanford Law Review

"Bench and bar will find this history enormously informative, provocative, and eminently readable. It has that sterling ring of credibility."

—Law and Liberty

"The whole fabric of American legal literature is superbly integrated in the context of American legal institutions."

—Legal Research Journal

A History of American Law has become a classic for students of law, American history and sociology across the country. In this brilliant and immensely readable book, Lawrence M. Friedman tells the whole fascinating story of American law from its beginnings in the colonies to the present day. By showing how close the life of the law is to the economic and political life of the country, he makes a complex subject understandable and engrossing. A History of American Law presents the achievements and failures of the American legal system in the context of America's commercial and working world, family practices and attitudes toward property, slavery, government, crime and justice.

Now Professor Friedman has completely revised and enlarged his landmark work, incorporating a great deal of new material. The book contains newly expanded notes, a bibliography and a bibliographical essay.

Lawrence M. Friedman is Marion Rice Kirkwood Professor of Law at Stanford University. He is the author of more than a dozen books and over one hundred and twenty articles. Professor Friedman is a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the recipient of numerous awards, including, for A History of American Law, the prestigious Order of the Coif, awarded by the Association of American Law Schools.
