AIDS AND THE RUSSIAN WOODPECKER*

You need a lesson in microbiology and scalar electromagnetics to really understand the enormity of our problem. The lesson won't be boring. I promise.

Some biologists think that viruses may, now that man has begun to fiddle with them, bring about the end of the human race or at least make us less human. Burdened with incurable virus illnesses, such as leukemia and brain cancer, man could "devolve" into a short-lived, unproductive creature not unlike the apes. Some mice strains develop cancer consistently because of their heredity. They live long enough to breed and then they die of cancer. What could man accomplish if, like cancer rats, his life span was only twenty to thirty years? Most men don't even grow up until they're forty. We would degenerate to the level of the Ethiopians.

Opinion is divided on viruses. While Dr. Peter Medawar, a Nobel prize laureate in medicine, says, "A virus is a piece of bad news wrapped in protein,"¹ others have developed a unifying theory.

Two microbiologists from the University of Montreal think that bacteria communicate by way of a virus network. We now know that bacteria are involved in all the great geobiological-chemical cycles of the planet earth. Animal life would not be possible without the bacterial cycles involved in every type of living creature.

If bacteria are dependent on viruses for intercommunication and survival then we too are at least indirectly, and possibly directly, dependent on viruses for our life cycle. It's a pretty radical theory but it has a lot of merit. We've only scratched the surface on the microbiology of viruses.

Some virologists are quite sanguine about all this. Richard Mulligan says, "Most of us feel that in 10 to 20 years (viral) therapy is going to have a big effect on the practice of medicine."² But I wouldn't count on it. Thus far all they have done is create new and terrible diseases. (Mulligan didn't specify who "most of us" are.)

Bacteria were discovered in the 19th century and were said to be the world's smallest living creatures. Then Stanley isolated the first virus in 1935 and for years it was argued as to whether they were really living organisms or not. Now they have won the "world's smallest creatures" crown away from bacteria. But not for long—more on that later.

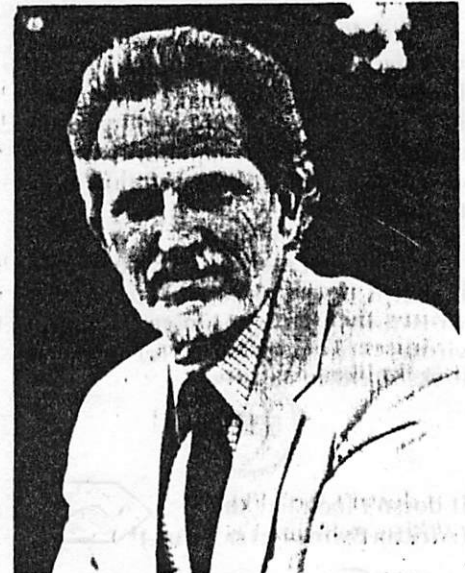

When I was in medical school they didn't teach much about virology because they didn't know much. We just thought they were little dots of matter, sort of alive but not really. Boy, were we wrong. Viruses have a lot of character. They are as variable as animal species, maybe more; and, like animal species, if two viruses look alike then they are from the same family. I learned that from my virology textbook, a $40 paperback. (Seemed like a lot of money for a paperback.) That's very important for you to know, this look-alike thing, as you will see subsequently.

Viruses are even more variable in appearance than bacteria. One, for instance, looks like a tennis racket:

Dr. William Campbell Douglass, M.D.,
Director, Douglass Center for Nutrition
& Preventive Medicine.

William Campbell Douglass, M.D. is one of the nation's leading authorities on health and medicine. His provocative and entertaining lectures on Nutrition, The Drugging of America, New Horizons in Wholistic Medicine, Pre-menstrual Syndrome, Chelation Therapy, and his book, The Milk of Human Kindness, have been presented all over the United States.

Dr. Douglass has four books to his credit. His latest, The Milk of Human Kindness is Not Pasteurized, is unique in the field of nutrition. He is former Florida State President of the American College of Emergency Physicians and former editor of the Journal of the Sarasota County Medical Society. He has been practicing nutritional medicine for 10 years and has extensive experience lecturing and discussing orthomolecular medicine on radio and television.

There's even a binding on the handle so it won't slip out of your hand! Another one looks like a crystal:

The tennis racket virus specializes in attacking bacteria. (Germs have problems, too.) The crystal virus likes ticks and pigs. A human virus called vesicular stomatitis virus looks like a bullet:  It causes your tongue and mouth to swell and hurt. No one has any idea why it always goes there instead of somewhere else.

A little more virology and then we will discuss a most astounding form of life that is so small it makes viruses look like bowling balls. My $40 paperback says, "Morphologic similarity correlates closely with similarity of viral components."

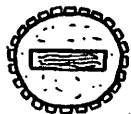

What that means in simple English is that if one virus looks like another virus then it is in the same family of viruses. The AIDS virus, for instance, looks like this:

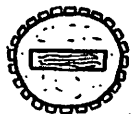

It doesn't look like this:  (African Swine Fever Virus.)

or this:  (Equine Infectious Anemia Virus.)

Here's the point of this cartoon show. Another virus found in cattle, called bovine visna virus, also looks like this:  Which means, according to the lessons in my $40 paperback, that AIDS is an altered form of bovine visna virus, a man-made killer, one of many that we will be facing in the years to come.

There's something I've come across that, if correct, is more disturbing than AIDS. Many people with the so-called Epstein-Barr disease, better called chronic fatigue syndrome until we figure out what it really is, have been found to harbor the African swine fever  virus

This virus causes HBLV, human B-lymphotropic virus, which is B-cell leukemia. Some virologists think that this virus now infects millions of middle class heterosexual Americans of both sexes. If they are correct then we are certainly facing a multi-bacterial plague beyond the conception of most Americans.

With the advent of antibiotics people lost their fear of bacteria. Syphilis, gonorrhea, typhoid, streptococcus, anthrax, plague, cholera, colon bacilli, and other bacteria responded quickly to antibiotics. The B-lymphocytes, which are destroyed by the African swine fever virus, called HBLV in humans, protect you from bacterial infection. Without B-cells the antibiotics won't work.

Do you realize how helpless doctors would be without antibiotics? Antibiotics relieved the doctor of the responsibility of thinking, educating, and innovating. Preventive medicine became preventive antibiotic treatment, vaccinations and "eat a balanced diet." Doctors will die along with the rest of us because they won't know what to do.

What we have been discussing is phase one of a two-pronged attack against the free world. Phase Two, which has already begun, has to do with that infinitesimal form of life I mentioned earlier. The virus family is about to lose its title of the world's smallest living creature.

Back in the early 20th century, Royal Rife claimed that with his highly specialized microscope he could look beyond present-day optical magnification and resolution and see down to the nuclear level of living things. Even today we can't look directly at a living virus. They're dead viruses and pictures of viruses. Rife was considered a lunatic for claiming to see components of individual molecules, many thousands of times smaller than a virus particle. It was considered that optical microscopes couldn't resolve ("see") something smaller than about 1/4 wave-length of light. Today, however, we know that with evanescent waves this is no longer a limitation. At least one researcher (Bearden) has pointed out that the construction of Rife's astounding microscope actually favored the use of such evanescent waves.³

Now don't say "so what," because this remarkable science may be the answer to the AIDS plague and it also has great potential for destruction. It is so evil in fact that AIDS could become a problem of secondary importance. Like atomic energy there are two sides to this technology—good and evil.

The Rife technical breakthrough is more important than the discovery of viral microbiology. It ranks with the defining of gravity and the splitting of the atom. Needless to say Rife was hounded into oblivion.

Royal Rife proved that there are living entities composed of structured electricity. These structured electrical "things," or electromagnetic "bugs," work in and around viruses and bacteria the way that viruses work in and around bacteria, plants, animals and humans. We have merely gone down to the ultimately smallest organism; a package of electrical energy that is truly a living creature.

Rife knew that he had revolutionized biology and thinking about life itself. With Rife, every living thing is reduced to the ultimate simplicity—electrical energy. We're back to the great power of the cosmos—the Force, the Great Watchmaker, dare I say it—God. How will the evolutionist explain this?

This great scientist proved that these living electrical bugs could be killed by a similar scalar electromagnetic energy and, in fact, probably any abnormal process causing disease could be reversed by this electrical energy. Cancer cells can be returned to normal cells. Infections can be instantly cured. Viruses, like AIDS, can be destroyed within the cell without harming the cell itself. This is a unitarian treatment that would bring biophysicists to the fore in treating disease and make conventional doctors obsolete. (In some ways they're already obsolete.)

In the 60's and the 70's; Antoin Priore (France) rigorously demonstrated hundreds of cures of terminal cancer and leukemia in laboratory animals, using a complex electrical machine that produced such evanescent waves and phase conjugate (time reversed) EM waves. Though his work was championed by prestigious members of the French Academy of Sciences, it has been ruthlessly suppressed.

American physicists have always said that meltdown, atomic explosions and other nuclear disasters are virtually impossible at American atomic energy plants because of all the built-in safety mechanisms. All Three Mile Island proved was that the system works. No one was hurt at TMI.

Although our atomic facilities are clearly intrinsically safe, they are no longer extrinsically safe because of the Russian Woodpecker scalar electromagnetic instruments of war. This is the downside to Rife's discoveries. Scalar electromagnetics will cure AIDS and cancer but there may not be any of us left to cure. Scalar EM encompasses electrogravitation, time reversed waves, and evanescent waves. It consists of waves in the actual fabric of spacetime itself.

In quantum mechanics, nearly all physical effects—even mechanical forces—are based at root on myriads of tiny electromagnetic forces. With scalar EM, specific patterns or structures of such microscopic EM forces can be captured, impressed on a normal EM signal, and deposited in a distant irradiated target.

The Russian Woodpecker is an over-the-horizon type of radar. The Soviets can, from a ship beyond the 3-mile limit, send a woodpecker beam to our various atomic facilities, with a scalar EM pulse that causes them to explode into a full scale atomic catastrophe. Everyone would think that it was an intrinsic failure of the system as there would be no evidence of an outside attack. Even our own scientists would be baffled because, as far as we know, they have no knowledge of scalar EM technology, much less scalar death ray weapons on line and in use by the Soviets.

The Soviets have used their death ray in Afghanistan. The "Smirch" causes instant death. The body falls like a rag doll and doesn't decay, because of total destruction of every cell and bacterium, for 30 days.⁴ I guess that's the good news.

The Soviets are literally pecking us to death while our scientists are scratching their heads. Our space launch capability has been reduced to zero through scalar EM attacks on our missiles when launched—Titan, Nike-Orion, Delta, Ariane, Aries, Minuteman III—all destroyed on launch, all known to be extremely reliable. We now have no satellites to monitor the Soviets. It is, according to Newsweek,⁵ a national security disaster. No one seems to know what to do. Paralysis has set in. Our missile-satellite program has been closed down, probably permanently.

A Soviet scientist named Kaznachev also conclusively showed that almost any kind of cellular death and disease pattern can be induced at a distance electromagnetically, by irradiating the target cellular systems with the "death photon" pattern for the desired effect. Recently, it has been discovered that for some time Kaznachev has been working with secret Soviet agencies in the outskirts of Moscow, where directed energy EM weapons are developed and built.

A subtle biological scalar EM attack is already under way. On the 4th of July, 1976 (The Soviets are big on using significant dates for their operations.) the Russian woodpecker, a gigantic 40-million-watt signal, began jamming the world's communications.

The U.S. government has admitted that the Soviets have placed a powerful electromagnetic grid over the entire United States. What they haven't admitted is that this Tesla force field is rapidly degrading the immune system of millions of Americans. So don't think for a minute that AIDS is somebody else's problem.

Omni magazine reported (February 1985): Despite the low esteem with which their science is regarded in the West, the Soviets have the world's largest research effort under way in bioelectromagnetism ... it's energy we can't see, feel, smell, or taste.

Remember that virus I told you about that likes ticks and pigs? It also likes humans. The African swine fever virus , altered for human consumption in a virology laboratory, may very well be the cause of the chronic fatigue syndrome now erroneously being blamed on the Epstein-Barr virus. But that's not the worst of it. The African swine fever virus causes B-cell leukemia (HBLV) in humans. If experts like Drs. Gallo and Cheney are correct, then millions of young Americans with the chronic fatigue syndrome will eventually die of HBLV leukemia. Gallo's group reports that HBLV exposure "has jumped from two percent to thirty percent in the general population in just four years."⁶

Epidemics are cropping up at an alarming rate—chronic fatigue syndrome, Legionnaire's disease, post-polio syndrome, leukemia-cancer. (Four members of the New York Giants football team are dead or dying of cancer.) There has to be some common factor causing the drastic deterioration in our health.

A continual, gradual electromagnetic attack by the Soviets over the past 12 years is the likely explanation. The Soviets know we don't react to anything unorthodox that gradually increases.

The enemy obviously hasn't neglected the biological aspect of their global warfare. The Wall Street Journal (August 12, 1985) reported that "Moscow has violated a 1972 treaty by operating a biological weapons program apparently including genetic experiments to create lethal new bacteria." They could have added that many of these "lethal new bacteria" were genetically engineered by communist scientists at Ft. Detrick, Maryland, U.S.A., having been invited to work there during the Nixon administration in an act of brotherly love. Can you believe that Ronny Reagan has signed another disarmament treaty with these killers?

The Soviets have a two-pronged attack to develop a Soviet super race. Because of the incredible stupidity and duplicity of every American administration since World War II, top Soviet and Chinese communist scientists have been placed inside of our cancer research laboratories and molecular biology laboratories. (See WHO Murdered Africa, Health Freedom News, November 1987.) The new strains of animal viruses developed there to grow in human cells for cancer research, make most excellent viral biological warfare agents if released en masse on humans. They succeeded in developing the AIDS virus, and many others that you haven't heard about yet, (HBLV, HTLV-1, II AND IV, EIAV, SV-40, FeLV, BSV, and on and on) and spreading them around the free world.

Using modified scalar electromagnetics, the Soviets can stop the epidemic, or control it, in their various slave states. AIDS will probably be allowed to spread in Poland where the population is still recalcitrant, whereas Bulgaria, which is more Communist than Russia, will remain healthy. The superrace, i.e., the only healthy people left, will be composed only of good communists.

Once we have been made too weak to resist through viral epidemics intensified by scalar electromagnetics and our retaliatory weapons have been neutralized by their star wars scalar EM technology,

MORE EVIDENCE—USE OF SOVIET TESLA SCALAR WEAPONS*

INTERPRETATION OF AN IMPORTANT NEW SOVIET STATEMENT

Valentin Falin, Chief of Soviet Union's Novosti Press Agency. As quoted in "SDI versus the plague," Washington Times, Mar. 8, 1988, p. 6.

"We won't copy you anymore: We'll take asymmetrical means with new scientific principles ... genetic engineering could be a hypothetical example. Things can be done for which neither side could find defenses or countermeasures, with very dangerous results. If you develop something in space, we could develop something on earth. These are not just words. I know what I'm saying."

Comment by T. E. Bearden: To understand Falin's statement, one needs to know of scalar electromagnetics (electrogravitation), time-reversed waves, photobiology, and EM induction of BEARDEN, LtCol, United States Army Reserve (ret), nuclear engineer, war games analyst and military tactician, holds a master's degree in nuclear science from Georgia Institute of Technology. During twenty year military career Bearden specialized in air defense systems, tactical and technical intelligence, nuclear weapons employment, computerized war games, antiradiation missile countermeasures, research and development of U.S. Army missile systems, and military weapons system requirements.

cellular death and disease patterns at a distance:

If one knows how to properly interpret what Falin is saying, it is very plain indeed.

Here is a mini-translation according to my interpretation:

"We won't copy you anymore:"

Read this as follows: "The things you are doing technologically are not the things we are doing. We have already done something else. We will go around your orthodox weapons with other weapons that you know nothing about."

"We'll take asymmetrical means with new scientific principles ..."

Here the word asymmetrical has very special meaning. Literally, it refers to broken symmetry (asymmetry) in physics. In broken symmetry, one or more conservation laws are violated. Western nations have not developed scalar electromagnetics, hence have not developed electrogravitation or the ability to curve local spacetime with electromagnetics. Western physicists still adhere to Einstein's limiting assumption that the local spacetime of the observer/laboratory is never curved. In the open Soviet physics literature, of course, Einstein's limiting restriction on general relativity has long since been removed. This implies direct laboratory experiment with local spacetime curvature (unrestricted general relativity, developed as an experimental science and technology). When the local spacetime is curved (asymmetrical), then all conservation laws can be violated. The Soviets have developed a wide variety of weapons using (1) electrogravitational local curvature of spacetime, and (2) time-reversed (phase conjugate) electromagnetic waves.

The phrase "asymmetrical means" refers to such electrogravitational weapons, devices, and effects.

The phrase "with new scientific principles" means that this is done with principles that we, the West, do not know or understand. Hence we do not understand—or even recognize—the effects that are evidenced when the Soviets utilize and test the effects, devices, and weapons. Some of the major "new scientific principles" and weapons that Falin is referring to are (1) electrogravitation (scalar electromagnetics, or unified EM/G fields, (2) EM induction of cellular death and disease at a distance, so that "biological warfare" is actually unleashed massively and suddenly on an entire population, by electromagnetic means, (3) beam, ray, and directed energy weapons of startling power, (4) real-time holography to produce geometric hemispheres, shields, and forms of incredible energy density, (5) launch-phase, midcourse, and terminal phase antimissile weapons and anti-bomber weapons of great power, (6) scalar EM anti-stealth weapons of very high effectiveness, (7) scalar EM underwater weapons, radar, and communications, (8) time-

reversed wave weapons, using a variety of waves such as sound, electromagnetic, and mechanical waves, and (9) weapon adaptations of Tesla's magnifying transmitter, which energize the entire earth itself into electrogravitational resonance, making of the earth a self-pumped phase conjugate mirror, and then on order directing giant, amplified phase conjugate replica pulses of mechanical and electrical energy furnished by the earth itself at specific targets to cause earthquakes, massive mechanical destruction, etc. Many of these weapons are detailed in Fer-de-Lance: A Briefing on Soviet Scalar Electromagnetic Weapons (Tesla Book Co., Greenville, TX, 1986) and "Soviet Phase Conjugate Weapons; Weapons that Use Time-Reversed Electromagnetic Waves" (Bulletin, Committee to Restore the Constitution, Fort Collins, CO, Jan. 1988.).
