Homosexual lifestyle is unacceptable

To the editor:

Well Mike, you did it. I have lived in Oldham County for 17 years. While several times in the past, editorials in The Era disturbed me, yours is the first to push my button. I refer to your article "Allowing gays in the military..."

Before addressing the two words that cause me to write for the very first time, I ask you what is the source of your statement "already tens of thousands of gays serving." You quote this as an admission of top military brass. But, alas, you are protected by the Constitution. You do not have to reveal your source. You can freely make statements without any substantiation.

Now, for the two words..."idle fool." Why is it culturally and politically correct for gays to actively protest, while one who would make a telephone call or write a letter to his/her Congressman or Congresswoman or the White House is considered an "idle fool." Do I not have a constitutional right of protest also? Or is this right reserved only for those who are culturally and politically correct as interpreted by the liberal left?

Finally, just perhaps, there are tens of thousands of us (and I have no concrete basis for this figure) who believe very sincerely that the homosexual lifestyle is an unacceptable anti-family way of living. Since the time of Lot in the Book of Genesis, God has called it sin.
