Kinsey---bunk and arrogance

DR. ALFRED C. KINSEY has dropped an atomic bomb designed to destroy what is left of sex morality in the United States.

This atomic bomb comes in the form of a large and heavy "scientific" report on "Sexual Behavior in the Human Female."

The bomb falls squarely on every foundation and pillar of the structure of sex morality. When the cloud of destruction rises, little may be left standing intact. Sex will have lost its intimate, personal character and become the most casual and common of all the biological activities of the human animal.

The defenses are down. Kinsey hits them with "facts." The church, the home, the family, the conventions of a moralistic society are roundly assailed. Kinsey finds these influences "bad" on the basis of his findings of "fact."

More than half the women who enter marriage, Kinsey tells us, have already enjoyed "sex freedom," but the virginal minority, he contends, are in the wrong. They, he holds, have been improperly influenced by religion and home. He wants them re-educated.

They must, he argues, acquire sex experience quite early in life. In order that they might heighten their enjoyment later in life. This need not, he persuades, entail any risk of burden. He means birth control. Nor need the emancipated debauche be fettered by fear of venereal disease. Cures, he notes, have become disarmingly easy.

WHILE HE NOTES with satisfaction that women are rapidly approaching the male animal in sexual aggressiveness and casualness, he finds much work yet to be done. For instance, the social custom that eads men to mate with women of somewhat younger age needs reversal. His "survey" tells him that it should be the other way around, because women can remain sexually active many more years than men.

The Kinsey report purports to be based upon "scientific" research consisting of interviews with 7,500 women, 5,940 of which have been used for this study. These women are assumed to represent a cross-section of the female population of the country, numbering about 80 million.

Is 80 million too large a figure? Not by much, because Kinsey includes two-year-old girls in his sex survey! His interviewers talked with their mammy!

The "facts" dug up by the Kinsey interviewers fall into two main classifications: those relating to the sex nature or "capabilities" of the female and those relating to the actual present-day sex behavior of the women interviewed. In the difference, lies the opportunity for Kinseyan "progress."

The Kinsey researchers assert, regarding the sexual nature of women, that they can be as fully and swiftly responsive as men, that they reach their peak of sex feeling later than males by as much as 10 years, but that it often outlasts the male's by many years. The main difference between the sexes, according to the report is one that is rapidly lessening in this age of growing freedom—the woman continues to be somewhat more inhibited than the man, this accounting for lower but far from low rate of pre-marital and extra-marital sex activity among women.

While the Kinsey report professes to be strictly "objective," it does nevertheless show a crusading preference for what its editor regards as the right attitude, as against the wrong attitude. Thus, the report veals that less than 50 per cent of the married women had been virgins at marriage.

Here it is! Kinsey's report on women

FINDS WIVES MORE FAITHFUL THAN HUSBANDS

By JANE STAFFORD Science Service Medical Writer BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—Married women are more faithful than married men. Only about half as many women as men commit adultery during their married lives.

This is the case, at least, for those men and women who contribute to the statistics of Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey and associates of Indiana University here for their study of human sexual behavior. "Sexual Behavior in the Human Female," the book, is the subject of the long-awaited second Kinsey report, to be published shortly in a book, "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male," by Dr. Kinsey and Dr. Wardell B. Pomeroy.

The Star-Ledger offers five readers today the complete five articles by Jane Stafford, Science Service Medical Writer, in a book, "Sexual Behavior in the Human Female," by Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey and Dr. Wardell B. Pomeroy. The book also will be found on Page Eight and Nine.

Dr. Kinsey and Dr. Pomeroy, of the Indiana University School of Medicine, in a book, "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male," published last year, reported that 25 per cent of the married women in the United States had been unfaithful to their husbands. This contrasts with the 50 per cent of the married men reported in the earlier Kinsey study.

Between the ages of 20 and 30, the Kinsey study found that 10 per cent of the women and 20 per cent of the men were unfaithful to their husbands. The Kinsey study, however, is based on the sexual behavior of women and men who were married before 1940. The study also found that 100 per cent of the women and 100 per cent of the men were unfaithful to their husbands at some time in their lives.

Men rated their wives' fidelity as a primary factor in their choice of a mate. The study also found that 100 per cent of the women and 100 per cent of the men were unfaithful to their husbands at some time in their lives. Mossadegh out; 300 dead in Iran

TEHRAN (AP)—Forces loyal to the absent Shah swept iron-willed, weepily Premier Mohammed Mossadegh out of power yesterday with a bloody and violent nine-hour coup.

At least 300 persons were killed and 1,000 wounded in the nine-hour struggle, a British official here reported today. The young Shah, a fugitive in Rome, said he would fly back to Iran to lead the country.

Mossadegh forced Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi to flee Sunday. The Shah's flight was reported from his home in Italy, a Hitler-type bunker from which he has ruled the country since 1941.

Vishinsky hits Rhee stand as bar to peace

UNITED NATIONS—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky today accused North Korean Premier Kim Il-sung of "barrenness" in his stand against peace in the Korean peninsula.

Vishinsky said that the North Korean Premier's stand was "barren" because it was based on the demand for the complete withdrawal of United States forces from the Korean peninsula.

AEC statement follows Red announcement

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U. S. Atomic Energy Commission confirmed today that Russia has exploded a hydrogen super-bomb.

A brief announcement from AEC Chairman Lewis W. Strauss said the Soviet Union had exploded a hydrogen super-bomb on the morning of Aug. 12.

Strasus said "certain information" about the Soviet test came from U. S. spies who had been monitoring the Soviet atomic program.

Strasus also said that the Soviet test was a "hydrogen super-bomb" and that it was "the most powerful atomic weapon yet exploded in the world."

But this fact is presented not as a curious tid-bit of gossip, but solely in relation to the further "fact" that the virgins suffered in their marriages from inexperience and, in consequence, from a greater degree of unhappiness and extra-marital adultery.

THE KINSEY REPORT is strong, very strong, in preferring freedom in sex behavior to established codes that inhibit such freedom. The influence of church, home and family are strongly deplored insofar as sex is concerned.

Many of America's 80,000,000 uninter-viewed females may, we hope, insist on the answers to at least two questions before accepting the Kinsey doctrine of "freedom." These questions are:

- 1. Assuming that less than 6,000 can be accepted as a cross-section of 80,000,000, is it possible that any woman who is willing to reveal the most personal facts of her sex life can be (a) truthful, (b) self-understanding, (c) reasonably free of distorting self-consciousness and (d) representative?
2. Boldly assuming what may be impossible—the "scientific" gathering of conclusive facts by the survey method—what happens to the morality of family life? Is it to be drowned upon or even outlawed, or is it to be allowed a measure of co-existence along with the new freedom?

This newspaper, as other newspapers, has had some experience with survey work in relation to the relatively easy fields of reader-research and advertising, and we know how large a margin for error we must allow. Granting that the Kinsey researchers may have developed an infinitely superior technique, can it be good enough to distill away from sex life all the pride and shame and ego and subtle self-deceptions and leave only cold, scientific fact? We doubt that, much more even than Kinsey doubts established morality. We think the scientific pretensions of the Kinsey report are bunk, mixed only by arrogance.

Consider the Kinsey enterprise in survey research against the background of much older and much more extensive efforts at human understanding—those of the clergy and psychiatrists.

MANY THOUSANDS of clergymen hear stories of behavior in formal confessionals and many other thousands hear such stories in less formal confessionals under circumstances far more favorable than a Kinsey interview. The religious communicant derives great comfort from his knowledge that the clergyman is securely bound by a sacred vow to respect his confidence. The psychiatrist's patient, too, is strongly reassured by the binding strength of professional ethics. Notwithstanding their greatly superior positions, the most perceptive clergymen and psychiatrists acknowledge that it is extremely difficult for a person to recall and express the whole truth about his most intimate secrets. At the risk of being labeled "reactionary," we refuse to give the Kinsey survey crew a higher rating than religion and psychiatry.

Nor can we believe that the Kinsey error of an innocent variety. The Kinsey error cannot be one of happenstance; it is clearly one of determined purpose, and of the gravest danger.

Kinsey is one of a long line of destroyers who have launched a assault upon assault against the basic morality of the great religions of our western world. He goes even further than Marx, who preached economic determinism; than Hitler, who preached racial determinism; he preaches sexual determinism. The difference between Kinsey and the others is that Kinsey has discovered and employed the atomic weapon of this war—the weapon of "scientific" research.

Kinsey's atomic bomb is expected to have shattering effect upon the morals and moral values of every man, woman and child. The statistics tell every individual in an authoritative, commanding voice that it is wrong as well as futile to dispute one's sexual stirrings or to teach such self-control to children. He contends that pre-marital freedom is essential to provide experience for later sexual enjoyment in marriage. But why would marriage and family be worth preserving if sexual enjoyment were its prime purpose and could be readily obtained with the approval of society in the pre- or non-marital state?

THE MORALITY Kinsey attacks is the ideal of religious marriage, which is a whole-hearted partnership between man and woman.

Such a partnership does not exclude or minimize sex and certainly does not make a virtue of sex ignorance. The wise person will want to understand himself and his life partner and his understanding will embrace sex as well as other physical and emotional phases of human life.

We recommend education in sex. But the matter of choosing instructor and instructor is vital.

The wrong teacher and the wrong teaching can be terribly destructive to the individual and to society. We definitely do not recommend the Kinsey book. It is utterly nihilistic—far worse than communism because it is the ultimate projection of Communist materialism in the moral field.

Moreover, the book on the whole is extremely dull reading and not worth its considerable price on any account. The new and old digests are revealing all of the book's general interest content; the rest is so much dull data to give sheer weight to the Kinsey arguments.

In but one respect does Kinsey's atomic bomb have any value. It is of value as a challenge. It is an imperative challenge to the clergy and to the parents to master the problem of teaching the whole truth about sex to the young people.

It is no longer possible or tolerable to leave the young without guidance. They are fatally misled by the prophets of Kinseyism. We strongly advise any young person who feels upset, or confused by the accounts of the Kinsey report to take his questions to his clergyman and his parents, and we advise the clergy and the parents to be compared with true and whole and courageous answers.

The atomic war for moral survival is no longer cold. It has become a hot and a total war.

Most voters back acts of '53 Congress

By KENNETH FINK Special to The Star-Ledger PRINCETON—How does this year's Congress rate with you? Most New Jersey voters across the state of New Jersey at the end of its first session in November of 1953, a statewide survey just completed by Princeton Research Service's New Jersey Poll show that a majority of the Garden State voters give this year's Congress a definite nod of approval.

When reporters asked a representative cross-section of the state's voters: "Would you say you approve or disapprove of the way this year's Congress handled the nation's problems this year, Communist China, etc.?"

Approve—54 per cent. No opinion—13 per cent. On the question of the kind of Congress did this year, Democratic voters are closely divided.

Those who express approval outnumber by a margin of two per cent those expressing disapproval.

At the same time, a stable group of Democratic Party voters are all-time out of favor—five lives—express disapproval. Here's the way New Jersey voters feel about this year's Congress:

DEMOCRATIC PARTY MEMBERS, STATEWIDE: Approve—54 per cent. Disapprove—31 per cent. No opinion—15 per cent.

AMONG RANK AND FILE INDEPENDENT VOTERS questioned in today's statewide survey, those who expressed approval outnumber by a margin of one per cent those who disapprove.

UN survival said to depend on peace talks

By CONSTANTINE BROWN The survival of the United Nations depends on the manner in which the majority of its members decides to handle the Korean peace talks scheduled to start sometime in October.

Besides the formal statement by Senate Majority Leader Knowland that he will support a resolution asking for withdrawal of the United States from the United Nations in the event Communist China asks for a seat in the UN, Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge has received a number of telegrams and letters from other members of the Senate to the same effect.

The chief American delegate to the UN knows well that this sentiment of the Senate is not an empty threat from a few "middle western isolationists" but represents the determined views of a large number of Senators from both parties.

Secretary of State Dulles who has made a habit of keeping his fingers out of the UN, has expressed his personal opinion in a letter to the UN Ambassador, Lodge, before leaving for a week's vacation.

There is no doubt in fact that the fate of the Korean Republic will become in such an eventuality an entirely secondary matter.

Our position as such an international gathering will certainly be unpleasant. Unless the UN is able to secure the support of a number of official declarations by Prime Minister Churchill and other leaders of the Labor Party it has become evident that we cannot count on Britain and France to support the UN.

The entire area from Morocco to Pakistan identifies us with the United Nations. The UN is a concern of all these countries and they will follow the leader.

Thus the presence of Russia among the UN members which has been the subject of much speculation in Korea will undoubtedly put us on the spot and will require us to make the diplomatic gathering with the cards stacked against us.

Laniel works to balance heavy budget

By PAUL GHALL Special to The Star-Ledger

Joseph Laniel inherited plenty of headaches when he took over the French premiership a little more than five weeks ago.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

Runaround hubby makes wife's pal anxious to tell all

DEAR-MRS. MAYFIELD: I have a problem which weighs on my mind and I thought you and Mr. M. might help me solve it. Perhaps you have had letters from other women faced with the question which confronts me, and can use their experience to guide me.

You see, my very best friend in Denver is a woman whom I've known for the past 15 or 20 years, or ever since her marriage to a young man who brought her here from out of town. But some time ago she has a red head and she's a drama of grandeur.

New, however, things have changed. They have had a beautiful home, but her husband has been and she has had a husband. She has been extremely about and has had a very good time. Her husband, on the other hand is better looking than he ever was, and has made of the "old set up" and the "new set up" a very good thing.

What's more, he has plenty of money. And I believe he is seriously attached to one young woman whom I've seen him with several times.

New here's what worries me. I'm devoted to this man's wife, and we have been writing to each other since she went back home. I would like to write her for her picture, but don't know what to say or how to tell her I like her. What's your advice?

Answer—Don't tell her that you like her... set in words, anyway. If you try to put it in words, she might think that you "say that to all the girls." Actions speak louder than words.

DEAR FRIEND: I think you would be extremely cruel if you were to tell this woman about her husband's infidelity. She would be hurt and she would know, anyway. Maybe she has a great deal of pride and she would not want to be told that her husband has had a mistress.

Maybe, in that matter, she doesn't know, rather than admit to her friends that she has had a mistress. Maybe she doesn't know, and she would not want to be told that her husband has had a mistress.

FOOD PROBLEMS

Adam and Eve never had it so good

By EDITH M. BARRETT. It seems as if people are always trying to shatter illusions. It has been suggested that the apple of the Garden of Eden may have been a peach. If so, perhaps it has been more eating.

The peach season is full of fruit and we are sure to hear arguments as to whether the white or the yellow fruit has the best flavor. The respective merits of the two and freestone peaches are always a good source of controversy. Since the freestone types more easily, we sometimes prefer them for that reason to all delicacies, especially unknown to Adam and Eve.

In season it is economical to buy peaches by the basket. The fruit that the farmer has used can be used at once and the rest be allowed to ripen. Peaches are allowed to ripen in the basket after picking. Of course, we all like to allow them to ripen completely on the tree. It is a little difficult to take what we get and be thankful.

Sliced peaches over hot waffles are even better than shortcake for a hot weather dessert. There's no beating of the oven then. An even cooler suggestion is to combine the sliced fruit with blueberries, seedless grapes and, possibly, bits of cubes of melons. After assembling the fruit, the waffles can be baked together with fruit juice, wine or a little brandy or rum.

Waffles with fresh peach dressing. 1 ripe fresh peach. 1 cup sugar. 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind. 2 teaspoons lemon juice. 3 whole waffles (4 sections each). 1 cup heavy cream, whipped. 2 tablespoons sugar. Peel, pit and slice peaches. Add 1/2 cup sugar, 1/2 the lemon rind and lemon juice. Blend gently. When waffles are done, place one on plate and cover with half the dressing. Place second waffle on top and cover with peaches. Combine whipped cream, remaining lemon rind and two tablespoons sugar. Spoon over top of peaches. Sprinkle cream with nutmeg. If desired, visit four servings.

FRESH FRUIT MELANGE. Have fruit chilled. Blend peaches and lemon juice. Blend gently. When waffles are done, place one on plate and cover with half the dressing. Failure to join in group is not necessarily a fault. Child can express individuality and be normal. (COURTESY BANISTER PHOTO)

YOU AND YOUR CHILD

Daring to be different not a fault in young

By MARCIA WINN. He was five and, his parents thought, quite bright. He seemed to be interested in everything any other five-year old was interested in, maybe a few other things.

His old family contained four children and lived in a fair section in the country. He was generally playing with his brothers and sisters.

Then, this last year, he went to kindergarten. He went in high excitement. He already could read a few words, could count readily to 25, seemed to have great musical talent, and was eager for learning. He was on the first rung of aspiration's ladder. His yearning was beautiful.

Halfway through the year the kindergarten teacher sent for his mother. A "conference" was required. Little Willy, she informed the mother in pained tones, had a "group status" problem.

"The group status" problem was that he generally played with his brothers and sisters. He was on the first rung of aspiration's ladder. His yearning was beautiful.

MAYO CLINIC PHYSICIAN

Kinsey book not for prudish; may anger some of its readers.

By DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ. Perhaps by this time some of you have seen Dr. Kinsey's new book telling what he and his colleagues have learned about the vagaries of sex in women. Doubtless many persons will be angered at some of the things they will read: They will say, "I don't believe it," or "I am not like that," or "That is sinful," or "Such things should not be talked about."

Even we doctors may find much of the book hard to accept because many of us are a bit prudish and prudish and unwilling to face honestly and dispassionately some of the problems of sex. Few of us have ever read much about the subject, and many of us do not even want to hear anything about it.

We doctors have usually refused to learn about the subject to help the poor, unhappy persons—men and women who were terribly oppressed by some freak of nature. I remember a medical article on serious neurasthenia. He said he was proud of the fact that he had never permitted the use of the word "neurasthenia" in his office on serious neurasthenia.

I can tell from their writings that even most of the psychiatrists, who certainly ought to know about the subject, have not read any of the books based on real studies of these people, and they have not read the very sad and moving autobiographies.

ACTUALLY, as Dr. Kinsey saw so clearly years ago, we physicians and psychiatrists, who are constantly being called upon to help people, puzzled and unhappy and all mixed up over sex, ought to know the facts about the subject. We may not like what we learn, but in science that is no matter. It should have nothing to do with the study. If a worker in science ever allows his emotions and his likes and dislikes and his religious ideas of what is disgusting or sinful to influence his study—that day his science will be a disaster.

You good people who want to be reading the new volume, I won't blame you for being surprised, or horrified or saddened or frightened by what you learn, but I will very much blame you if you let any of Dr. Kinsey's words start impugning his motives or calling him names. You might just as well start reviling the great astronomer on Pikes Peak Mountain for having seen with his new telescope a "universe inconceivably larger than the one seen by the old prophets of Israel."

Years ago when I heard that a scientist was at last going to make a thorough study of sex in man, I was so pleased that I did what I usually do under such circumstances: I made a plagiarism of his name. In Bloomington, Ind., I found a fine, friendly, delightful

Q. I WAS A bookkeeper before I entered the service. Will I be allowed to take a brush-up course on that subject under the Korean GI Bill after I have been released?

A. No. The law prohibits veterans from studying for objectives for which they are already qualified. However, you would be allowed to train for an advanced objective such as an accountant.

TIPS FOR TEENS

On treating someone as special

By ELINOR WILLIAMS. Boys have problems in the moonlight—and we have been writing to you. One of them is how to tell their favorite date that they like her VERY much.

I recently met a girl who was visiting in our town. writes one. I grew to like her while she was here and we have been writing to each other since she went back home. I would like to write her for her picture, but don't know what to say or how to tell her I like her. What's your advice?

Answer—Don't tell her that you like her... set in words, anyway. If you try to put it in words, she might think that you "say that to all the girls." Actions speak louder than words.

DEAR FRIEND: I think you would be extremely cruel if you were to tell this woman about her husband's infidelity. She would be hurt and she would know, anyway. Maybe she has a great deal of pride and she would not want to be told that her husband has had a mistress.

Maybe, in that matter, she doesn't know, rather than admit to her friends that she has had a mistress. Maybe she doesn't know, and she would not want to be told that her husband has had a mistress.

Newarkers say most women would balk at Kinsey quiz

Although Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey claims to have interviewed 8,000 women to gain data for his book, 'The Sexual Behavior of the Human Female,' to be published Sept. 1, a check of 10 men and women in the Newark area showed most didn't even want to discuss the book.

Kinsey finds wives truer than husbands

(Continued from Page One) Kinsey's study found that women are more likely to be sexually active than men. The study also found that women are more likely to be sexually active than men.

THE AMOUNT of schooling the women had, however, made very little difference in their sexual activities. This is one way in which the girls and women differed from boys and men.

Married women are more faithful than husbands, Dr. Kinsey reports in new book

the girl to have many affairs. The woman will be more likely to be unfaithful than the man, according to Dr. Kinsey's findings.

The reason for this, he says, is that the woman's sexual response is more directly related to the physical contact of the man's body than the man's response is to the woman's. The woman's response is more immediate and more intense, and she is therefore more likely to be satisfied with her husband's performance.

Dr. Kinsey also found that women are more likely to be faithful than men. This is because women are more likely to be satisfied with their husbands' performance, and they are therefore less likely to seek other partners.

for actual coitus (intercourse between man and woman) that provides most females with their first real understanding of a heterosexual experience.

Dr. Kinsey's findings are based on a study of 10,000 men and women of various ages and backgrounds. He found that women are more likely to be faithful than men, and that women are more likely to be satisfied with their husbands' performance than men are with their wives'.

whereas in the higher educational groups, a half-hour or more may be required. Marriage manuals make a mistake in not allowing for such differences in women and in not explaining that a woman is a climax.

THE SEXUAL BEHAVIOR of young people has not changed much through the centuries. But as many a teen-ager has complained, the old folks don't understand. Dr. Kinsey says it follows that the sexual behavior of young people has not changed much through the centuries.

Of 4,411 girls and women, 10 per cent had been approached before adolescence by grown men who seemed to be making sexual advances. But three-fourths of all the girls in the study had not recognized that they had been approached by an older male.

capacity, is the human male, it drops steadily from a peak in the late teens, when it is at its highest, to its lowest point at its height to old age. In the human female the 17- to 20-year-old period reaches a peak in the twenties, as sexual capacity does, and then drops to a plateau on which it stays for many years, declining only as she reaches her mid-fifties or sixties.

STILL TO BE answered also is the question of the exact significance of the pituitary gland in the head in male and female sexual responsiveness. This gland has often been called the body's master gland because of its influence on other glands.

Dr. Kinsey's findings are based on a study of 10,000 men and women of various ages and backgrounds. He found that women are more likely to be faithful than men, and that women are more likely to be satisfied with their husbands' performance than men are with their wives'.

THE REASON WOMEN are less promiscuous than men and may be more faithful is probably the fact that they are not conditioned to be excited by so many psychological stimuli.

Mistaken notion on sex assailed

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—Most marriage manuals make a mistake in assuming that the female body that is so responsive to sexual stimulation is also so responsive to sexual stimulation.

Delinquency rise blamed on adults

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—Grown-ups who believe juvenile delinquency has increased as a result of the increase in the number of young people, can blame the increase on their own failure to understand the nature of young people.

Dr. Kinsey's findings are based on a study of 10,000 men and women of various ages and backgrounds. He found that women are more likely to be faithful than men, and that women are more likely to be satisfied with their husbands' performance than men are with their wives'.

Glandular effect on sexual aging

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—There is some evidence for believing that a small gland at the base of the brain and certain body chemicals called 17-ketosteroids may have more to do with the sexual aging of men and women than the sex glands themselves.

Dr. Kinsey's findings are based on a study of 10,000 men and women of various ages and backgrounds. He found that women are more likely to be faithful than men, and that women are more likely to be satisfied with their husbands' performance than men are with their wives'.

IN MOST STATES, his findings show, 80 per cent of the men and 70 per cent of the women are regularly breaking some sex law.

Dr. Kinsey's findings are based on a study of 10,000 men and women of various ages and backgrounds. He found that women are more likely to be faithful than men, and that women are more likely to be satisfied with their husbands' performance than men are with their wives'.

THIS DOES NOT APPEAR to be correlated with any difference between the sexes in anatomy, physiology, capacity to be aroused by mental stimuli, sex drive or female hormones or any other factor except the output and presumably production of the chemical called 17-ketosteroids.

Dr. Kinsey's findings are based on a study of 10,000 men and women of various ages and backgrounds. He found that women are more likely to be faithful than men, and that women are more likely to be satisfied with their husbands' performance than men are with their wives'.

Dr. Kinsey's findings are based on a study of 10,000 men and women of various ages and backgrounds.

He found that women are more likely to be faithful than men, and that women are more likely to be satisfied with their husbands' performance than men are with their wives'.

Dr. Kinsey's findings are based on a study of 10,000 men and women of various ages and backgrounds.

He found that women are more likely to be faithful than men, and that women are more likely to be satisfied with their husbands' performance than men are with their wives'.

THE HISTORIES of the 10,000 men and women above mentioned show that those with sexual experience before marriage had a higher percentage of sexual satisfaction than those without such experience.

Dr. Kinsey's findings are based on a study of 10,000 men and women of various ages and backgrounds. He found that women are more likely to be faithful than men, and that women are more likely to be satisfied with their husbands' performance than men are with their wives'.

ALL THESE IDEAS are wrong, Dr. Kinsey finds. The advice based on them, that the need for long periods of petting and foreplay before a woman is ready for coitus to climax, is consistently wrong.

Dr. Kinsey's findings are based on a study of 10,000 men and women of various ages and backgrounds. He found that women are more likely to be faithful than men, and that women are more likely to be satisfied with their husbands' performance than men are with their wives'.

THE IDEA that a person may control his sexual response is a sufficient to spoil his mind to the matter is likewise based on a study of 10,000 men and women of various ages and backgrounds.

THE TRUTH is, according to Dr. Kinsey, that the sexual response is a function of the body and the mind, and that the two are inseparable.

NEARLY 90 per cent of the women who had sexual experience before marriage were pregnant, Dr. Kinsey declares. "There is particularly an excuse for such a high percentage of pregnancies," he says, "with modern contraceptive devices."

Dr. Kinsey's findings are based on a study of 10,000 men and women of various ages and backgrounds. He found that women are more likely to be faithful than men, and that women are more likely to be satisfied with their husbands' performance than men are with their wives'.

EVEN WHEN not carried to the limit of intercourse with a man, sexual petting before marriage provides girls with useful experience, Dr. Kinsey's opinion is. He says it is better than the sex, chamber or religious instruction, lectures or books, classes in biology, sociology or philosophy.

AGHAST AT KINSEY

Britons think their women are different

LONDON (NS)—British newspaper reaction yesterday to Dr. Alfred Kinsey's study of the sex life of American women ranged from a boy's cry of the story to a scathing lampoon of the report.

Many newspapers expressed the attitude of "it can't happen here," in commenting on the previous at Dr. Kinsey's new book.

All London newspapers with the exception of the London Times and the Daily Worker mentioned the report.

Lord Beaverbrook's mass-circulation Daily Express said in an editorial that it "is not a word of the stuff."

U. S. WOMEN DIFFERENT

"Particularly the strange American woman is quite different from the European," said the Daily Express.

"In one out of every four wives in the city of Birmingham who are asked 'do you know your husband?'"

Are there, in fact 70,000 unmarried women among Birmingham's 712,000 wives?" the paper asked.

"Yet that is the conclusion one ought to come to if the general findings of Dr. Kinsey are accepted," the newspaper said.

"Rubbish chatter like this can do more harm than it does good," the newspaper said.

SEX HERE TO STAY

The Daily Mail printed the most terse comment: "It is undoubtedly here to stay."

In Stockholm, Sweden, a well known female doctor said that she had interviewed Swedish women who had experienced pre-marital intercourse.

"I think French women (and Latin women) are much less conservative than Anglo-Saxon women," said the doctor.

Dr. Kinsey's report on the sex life of American women is a contradiction of all the important two-or-more-decade studies conducted by sociologists such as Burgess, Locke and Popenoe.

According to these sociologists, pre-marital experience has proven to be an almost insurmountable barrier to success in marriage.

This refers to Kinsey's claim that (1) the girl who does not expect to remain unmarried is more likely to remain unmarried.

(2) that women who had pre-marital relations had more success in marriage than those who did not have such experience.

The doctor's methodology and procedure can stand questioning in his own right.

Although I'm reluctant to write in such a book I am forced to do so because my views on some of the errors pointed in the Kinsey report, including:

1. "Necking" and "telling" do not necessarily fall into the category of pre-marital relations as implied by Dr. Kinsey.

2. He enters the field of history and draws the conclusion that "sex-nerveless" men named and have a relation to sex drive and response.

3. He states that "although he is a pharic acid which will wear away and destroy the body."

4. He states that "the sex drive is a function of the sex glands and is not a function of the sex glands."

Kinsey's '26 book still leads others

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (NS)—The first book by Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey in his present research series, "The Sexual Behavior of the Human Male," said 236,000 copies had been sold.

"The book has been a volume in the series since 1949 and has sold 148,396 copies. Its title, "An Introduction to Biology,"

When three-week actress-authorika Chase, who wrote "In Bed We Cry" and "Pant Imperfect," said Kinsey's statistics show more and more women have experiences before marriage.

"I hope they're true. Men and women make better husbands and wives if they have had some experience."

WRITER SEES GREAT SERVICE

Amy Vanderbilt, member of the socially prominent Vanderbilt family and author of "Complete Book of Etiquette," said she thought Kinsey had performed a great service by writing down the facts.

She said it was perfectly all right to discuss sex in polite society—"within reason."

"Times have changed very much in the last 20 years. It is very much a part of our conversation now," she said.

Swanson, 44, was not surprised to learn that half the Kinsey-interviewed women admitted pre-marital intercourse with a man—without a sexual partner.

"You don't even know about your best friend," Miss Swanson said. "I'm sure that was not the case when I was a girl. Remember, I was born before the last two wars."

Miss Swanson refused to frown on Kinsey's claim more women are sleeping in the nude. She said she supposed napping in nothing is as the first of today "what taking her girls off was to the taper of the physical."

"RED HOT MARIA" PLEASER

"Now this is what I would classify as a mark of progress," boomed Sophie Tucker, the only remaining red hot mama, when she heard about the Kinsey report.

"Girls are progressing in sex as they have in all other business," Miss Tucker said. "You just can't compare today with the early days. We girls just had to be a little quieter with our personal lives. Then they're ready to be about what they're doing today."

Blip-lease dancer Opya Rose said she was ready to believe what Dr. Kinsey said.

"It's an authority," she said. "I know I haven't spoken to almost 5,000 women about their intimate sex lives."

Miss Chase said the thought publication of the facts was a good idea.

"The more you know about anything in the world, the more interesting it becomes," she said.

"The report also will help women accept sex as something that just comes naturally and not as a special phase of life, she said.

"It becomes rather like television," Miss Chase said. "When you first get a television set, you plunk yourself down in front of it and give it too much attention. After a few weeks, you know me about it and you fit it more liberally into your life."

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (NS)—A top-ranking member of Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey's staff of scientists disclosed yesterday that Kinsey is planning to conduct a study of the sex life of European women.

OTHER PAPERS DECRY REPORT OF U. S. EXPERT

LONDON (AP)—The Sunday newspaper, The People, published its own "Kinsey report" yesterday, saying that British wives are more often faithful than their American sisters—largely because of lack of opportunity or fear of being caught. "British wives say the [Kinsey] report isn't so far wrong," The People reported. Other London newspapers generally were scornful of the American sex expert's latest findings. The Sunday Express, which has taken no direct notice of the report, denounced the "lecherous journalists" who are capitalizing on it. The People based its analysis of British sex life on questionnaires filled out by just over 1,000 women about one-fifth the number interviewed by Dr. Alfred Kinsey and his associates in the U. S. "Our survey, small as it was representative of the whole country, the paper said, but it was confined to women between 18 and 30 years of age, a narrower field than that of Dr. Kinsey's.

Kinsey reported that one American wife in four has sexual experience outside of marriage. The People said only one British wife in nine strays from the marital fold, but added: "Our survey produced the admission from four married women out of 10 that they were faithful to their husbands not because of conviction but because of the lack of opportunity and the fear of discovery. The People's survey was roughly comparable to Kinsey's figures. They included the following statistics: L. Three British wives in 10 do not achieve sexual satisfaction until they are 32, and one in 10 placed the age of her first satisfactory sexual experience at 34 or more. M. The average British woman admits to being in slightly less than half of her sexual relationships, compared to the 710 average reported by Kinsey's subjects. N. Seven in 10 of the British women reported said their only sexual partner was the man they later married.

The People concluded that Kinsey's survey as a whole is "too conservative" and that "in a limited sense," Dr. Kinsey's findings "do not show the sexual urge of women is greater than is commonly supposed." Kinsey's findings, based on the statements of "clergy, rival sex experts or special dispatches," are "not entirely reliable." The Sunday Graphic, Sunday Pictorial, Empire News and Sunday Chronicle printed "negative reports on Kinsey's findings" and the statements of "clergy, rival sex experts or special dispatches." The Sunday Express, however, reported on Kinsey's findings with "entire impartiality" and "without comment." ## Child health aid promised to Koreans

SEOUL (AP)—The American Korean Foundation, a private relief organization, announced yesterday that it will make several grants of funds for Korean child welfare.

Dr. Howard Bush of the New York University College of Medicine, head of the 11-man foundation group, said the organization will work in cooperation with Korean Ministries of Health and Social Affairs.

CHILD AID PROMISED

Dr. Bush said the grants announced today would cover: 1. The setting up of a team to be assigned to the Ministry of Health to work on treatment and control of tuberculosis. He estimated there are 1 1/2 million cases of TB in Korea.

HEALTH SCHOOL

2. The establishment, in September, of a school of public health, operated by the Ministry of Public Health and partly aided by American military and other personnel here. Dr. Leonard Mayo of the Association of Crippled Children in New York also reported the start of several projects for helping Korean children.

The foundation is making funds available to the Korean government for a good tracer service for children like that in Europe after the last war, Mayo said. The object is to reunite children with families they had lost because of the war.

Giordano cites success of playgrounds

ORANOE — Commissioner Ralph E. Giordano yesterday said the city's playgrounds were doing well after more than a year of operation.

"We had more boys and girls at the playgrounds than at any other time, and certainly more activities for them," he said. "This past week, the display of playground products at the library was an outstanding many youngsters wanted to buy some of the toys which the children had done."

The commissioner added that he might have an answer to the playground situation in the newly-populated Fifth Ward. "It is definite that we cannot get any land from Rosedale Cemetery, but we are dealing with another group which has a site which would suit our needs. It could solve our problem there," Giordano said.

Unfortunate aspect about the strikes in France is that they are almost certain to happen again. France is likely to have a wave of paralyzing strikes—unless certain drastic reforms are made in the French tax system and the French system of food distribution.

Displeasant but inescapable fact about the French economic situation is that the French government has been living on subsidies from the U. S. instead of collecting taxes, and the only people who pay taxes in France are industrial workers, while soldiers and government employees—thanks to payroll deductibles. But in the higher brackets taxes are just not collected.

During the last year 1951-1952 for instance, only 7,000 Frenchmen declared income taxes on a salary of more than $5,000 a year. Of these 7,000 were government officials whose salaries are a matter of public record and who therefore could not fudge. Another 1,000 were officials of semi-government institutions—railroads, banks, gas and utility companies—whose salaries are also known.

This left 4,300 Frenchmen who claimed they were paid $5,000 or more. Since the number should have been over 100,000, this means that about 84,000 Frenchmen in the upper brackets simply cheated on their income taxes.

AND THE FRENCH government did absolutely nothing about it. There is no Commissioner T. Coleman Andrews in France. French taxes are plenty high—higher than ours. If a Frenchman makes $10,000, he pays around 40 per cent. If he goes much higher than this the taxes are almost confiscatory. But the upper brackets French simply do not pay, and the government makes little effort to collect.

Meanwhile, workers with no taxes deducted from the payroll—do pay, and this was one of the basic reasons behind the crippling strikes.

Reason No. 3—was the shocking price of food. Food prices in France are actually higher than in the United States, though wages are much lower.

Reason No. 4—was almost complete failure by the French government to do anything about housing.

After the war, the French government instituted a low-cost housing program under which apartments were to be built by the government. But the program is almost dead. However, the government is building them at the rate of 1200 a year.

The government is also subsidizing a housing program by private industry. About 4,000 apart-new built and are selling like hot cakes for around 120,000.

MORE OF THE inside facts about the living and unliving of Dr. Allen Austin, chief of the Bureau of Standards, can now be told.

Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks privately has blamed Vice President Nixon for putting him into the Austin hot water. It was Nixon who went to bat for one of his California constituents, Jess M. Ritchie, maker of the now notorious battery additive, AD-2X, which Dr. Austin's experts found to be of no value in prolonging the life of batteries. Nixon, not an expert on anything technical, complained about Austin to Secretary Weeks.

Another new administration leader who got Weeks into the Austin jam was Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Craig Sheffer, the fountain pen manufacturer, and who contributed $1,000 to Sen. McCarthy and $1,000 to rabbi-rouser Abraham K. Marx. Sheffer, once had a bail-point pin-sticked by the Bureau of Standards and didn't like certain requests they made for what he considered confidential information.

Secretary Weeks has now transferred the Bureau of Standards from Sheffer's jurisdiction to the Commerce Department.

What Weeks didn't know when he went off half-cocked in firing Austin was that the Bureau had developed this pin-stick in a "water-tight" manner in the winter of 1944, and helped check General Eisenhower's request for the Battle of the Bulge. Weeks also didn't know that almost every important scientist in the bureau was ready to quit in protest against Austin's dismissal.

Dr. Austin, a Mormon and a Republican, came to Washington under the endorsement of that arch-Republican, Sen. Reed Smoot, of Utah. However, the Bureau of Standards chiefs have kept him out of politics.

THE MYSTERIOUS near-aphasia of mystery man Henry Ormswald and lady friend in a Jersey City apartment was not the first time he has been found in a somewhat similar predicament.

Early in July the famed tax-filer was found in apartment 204-A of the Warden Park Hotel, lying in a heap of broken glass. His lady friend was also lying on the floor, she comatose, in a similar condition.

Judging by the appearance of the room, they had been showing table lamps and tumblers at each other. Ormswald had occupied the room for a week, and his lady friend, described by the hotel detective as a middle-aged, dark-eyed woman, had been in the room for a week.

Ormswald received a suspended jail sentence from the U. S. District Court on the ground that he was suffering from a "heart" condition. He also "sucked testimony" before a Senate investigating Committee, when this column first exposed his part in tapping the telephone wires of Howard Hughes on behalf of Pan American Air-

TRAIN WRECK IN INDIA

Because of a train wreck up the line, the conductor routed us out at 4 A. M. and said we would have to wait at Bina until the tracks were cleared before going on to the tiger-hunting country of Bhopal. That was why I spent 24 hours in a Hindu railroad station and why I will never again feel the same about railroads for Hindus.

At 4 A. M. the platform was full of people sleeping at random—breasts, lunatics and the terrifying cripples who were their stumps in your face and exhibit running sores for a profit.

After slipping over a couple of pretty cute untouched, I discovered the first-class waiting room where they keep the most diseased and unsightly.

There is nothing to see here except breasts," said the Bikh. "This is a railroad junction and they only mud hulk."

By managing to sleep most of the morning, I put off the battle with the breasts until afternoon. Then the word got around that a foreigner was on hand and that the sight of a big bird nose might produce a few rupees.

That brought on a parade of cripples and lunatics suffering from a variety of diseases.

WINSTON CHURCHILL back on his feet

By WILLIAM H. STONEMAN

Bir Winston Churchill is on his feet again, rarin' to go. After his temporary withdrawal from official activities because of mental fatigue the Prime Minister appears to be convinced, and the doubts now withdrawn, that he is able to run the country's home and foreign affairs as well as ever.

This promise to be the situation until, unless the Conservative Party conference which convenes on Oct. 4 decides that somebody else had better take over the prime ministership and the leadership of the party.

Mr. Winston's return to active government creates a great deal of confusion on all sides.

It is particularly confusing to the Foreign Office which regards him as a "Winston" and an "octogenarian messiah."

The Foreign Office has been run with great competence by Lord Salisbury since the disappearance of Mr. Winston and Anthony Eden, the Foreign Secretary. Lord Salisbury is a public figure and a public figure of considerable importance. When he deals with the public he is not bound by the same rules as the Prime Minister. He is a public figure and a public figure of considerable importance.
