Pedophiles Claim Perversion Is Protected

Advocating the subjection of children to perversion is constitutional, according to one of the leading cheerleaders for the international culture distorters.

By P. SAMUEL FONER

The ACLU has announced it will represent the North American Man/Boy Love Association (NAMBLA)—a group that advocates sexual relations between men and boys—in a lawsuit brought by the family of a slain 10-year-old.

The family of Jeffrey Curley of Cambridge, Mass., said the NAMBLA and its web site—which has been taken off the Internet—incited the attempted molestation and murder of the boy on Oct. 1, 1997.

According to court records, one of two men convicted in the killing, Charles Jaynes, 25, reportedly viewed the homosexual group's web site shortly before the killing, and also had in his possession some of NAMBLA's publications.

Also convicted in the killing was 24-year-old Salvatore Sicari. ENTER 'RIGHTS CHAMPIONS'

The ACLU said the case, filed in federal court in mid-May, involves constitutional issues of freedom of speech and association.

John Roberts, executive director of the Massachusetts branch of the ACLU, told The Boston Globe on Aug. 31: "For us, it is a fundamental First Amendment case.

"It has to do with communications on a web site, and material that does not promote any kind of criminal behavior whatsoever," he said.

ACLU officials said NAMBLA members deny encouraging coercion, rape or violence. But actions of some members of the group seem to put the lie to that assertion.

Lawrence Frisoli, an attorney who represents the Curleys, said he is glad the ACLU is defending NAMBLA, because he has had trouble locating the group's members who (for obvious reasons) are very low profile.

Harvey Silverglate, an ACLU board member, said on Aug. 31 that the group's attorneys will try to block any attempt by the Curleys to get NAMBLA's membership lists or other materials identifying members.

The ACLU reportedly will also act as a surrogate for NAMBLA, allowing its members to defend themselves in court while remaining anonymous.

According to the Globe, NAMBLA officials in the past have said their main goal is the abolition of age-of-consent laws that classify sex with children as rape.

At two separate trials last year, prosecutors said Jaynes and Sicari were sexually obsessed with the boy, lured him from his Cambridge neighborhood with the promise of a new bike, and then smothered him with a gasoline-soaked rag when he resisted their sexual advances.

They then stuffed him into a concrete-filled container and dumped it into a Maine river.

According to court records, Sicari, convicted of first-degree murder, is serving a life sentence without the possibility of parole. Jaynes' second-degree murder and kidnapping convictions enable him to seek parole in 23 years.

The Curleys were awarded $328 million by a superior court jury in a civil suit against Jaynes and Sicari.

Even many libertarians who believe in principle in the concept that there should be no limitations on any kind of literary and photographic freedom of expression are among those who are first to point out that sexual relations between adults and children are against the law to begin with. So NAMBLA is going beyond the pale even in the minds of free thinkers. ☼

The American Civil Liberties Union claims that advocacy of pedophilia falls under the category of speech protected by the First Amendment. But protecting perversions and criminal activity is clearly not what our Founding Fathers intended when they wrote the First Amendment.
