Dr. Judith Reisman says she's "at war"

Researcher blasts Kinsey Report in Rotary speech

Editor's note: What follows is the first in a four-part series about the efforts of Dr. Judith Reisman and an organization called RSVP America to discredit the work of sex researcher Dr. Alfred Kinsey, and to remove his influence from American society.

The event that set up a gray-haired grandmother as David against the twin Goliaths of the Kinsey Sex Institute and the international pornography industry occurred at a psychology conference in Wales in 1977.

After Judith Reisman, Ph.D., delivered a research paper at the conference, a Canadian colleague took her quietly aside.

"He told me that if I was really interested in finding the cause of the global child sex abuse epidemic, I should take a hard look at the work of Dr. Alfred Kinsey," said Dr. Reisman, as she waited to take the podium at the Louisville Rotary Club's October 23 meeting. "When I asked why, he told me that he had worked with Kinsey and Pomeroy [Kinsey's research associate]—and that one was a homosexual and the other a pedophile."

Dr. Reisman followed the tip, she said, and what she discovered on page 180 of Kinsey's 1948 blockbuster text Sexual Behavior in the Human Male fired an outrage in her soul that has fueled a 20-year crusade to discredit Kinsey's work.

She is at war, she said, fighting against huge odds to bring information to the public that establishes Alfred Kinsey as "a homosexual, an obsessive, masochistic sex addict, a panderer, a pornographer, an exhibitionist, a voyeur, and a liar." More importantly, she is battling to re-establish the Judeo-Christian morality that Kinsey's "skewed research" replaced in America in 1948.

Judith Reisman doesn't look like a warrior. Or a David, for that matter. She looks like a 69-year-old grandmother. The dark-eyed little woman who earned her doctorate in communications from Case Western University is used to doing interviews while she swallows a quick meal. That's standard operating procedure in her coast-to-coast speaking tour, sponsored by the national anti-Kinsey campaign called RSVP America. The campaign was launched three years ago by Crestwood resident Eunice Ray.

"Have you ever seen Table 34?" Dr. Reisman asks intently, fire burning in her dark eyes. "It's on page 180 of Dr. Kinsey's book. When I first saw it, my jaw dropped open. I couldn't believe such a thing was in a scholarly textbook."

Table 34, and other tables like it on surrounding pages in the Sexual Behavior in the Human Male text, lists in detail the sexual responses of children ranging in age from 2 months to 10 years old.

"I was dumfounded," Dr. Reisman says. "I just sat there, looking at that table, wondering how on earth they came by those numbers! And wondering why nobody ever questioned where they came from. When the Kinsey report was published, nobody asked: 'Who did that to those children, Dr. Kinsey?' If anybody had had the sense at the time to wonder how a reputable clinical scientist could document the number of orgasms of a 5-month-old baby, there would have been a trial right then and there, and we would not be who we are in America today."

When Dr. Reisman rises to address the group of Louisville professional people, she gets immediately to the point she has driven home in large cities and small towns all across America in similar addresses for the past three years.

"I have come to Louisville to talk to you about how Dr. Kinsey elevated a group of pedophiles to the status of child sex experts and how their brutal criminal 'sexploits' with infants and children were codified into American law, public policy and sex education," she says. "Today, I will address how America has gone from chastity to condoms in one generation. All that was depraved and unspeakable behavior prior to Kinsey is today offered as 'normal sexuality,' thanks to the Kinsey Institute and Kinsey, whose books changed America's sexual constitution."

Dr. Reisman then tells the quiet audience that the Kinsey Institute at Indiana University in Bloomington has answered her charges about the charts of children's orgasms with the explanation that "Dr. Kinsey and his staff did not abuse the children." The institute admits, however, that Kinsey and his researchers duly reported the observations of known pedophiles who repeatedly sexually abused a total of 317 children, including toddlers, a 2-month-old infant and seven small girls.

"But according to the Kinsey Institute, children who have been molested are upset only because of their parents' 'old-fashioned attitudes.' In fact, Professor Kinsey said that child rapists 'may have contributed favorably to the child's later socio-sexual development.'"

Pointing out that Kinsey has now been identified by biographers as a man who engaged in homosexual sex, filmed his wife having sex with institute staff members, and was filmed engaging in various deviant sex acts, Dr. Reisman tells the crowd that the studies the Indiana researcher conducted were skewed toward his own sick sexual tastes.

Kinsey's sex model was built on "the sex lives of prisoners and sex offenders," she says. Eighty-six percent of Kinsey's 5,600-man sample was made up of "sexual deviates, with fully 1,400 admitted sex offenders.

"In the past 40 years, Kinsey's disciples have trained hundreds of thousands of followers in the Kinsey sex model, so that family life teachers, sex educators and counselors working in public, private and parochial schools unwittingly disseminate Kinsey's skewed view of sex to their young charges."

That model, she says, consists of eight points:

1. Children are sexual from birth and should be taught about all sex acts.
2. Once consent is obtained, no sex acts should be forbidden adults or children.
3. Masturbation is essential for physical and emotional health, and can never be obsessive or excessive for adults or children.
4. There is no medical, moral, or scientific reason to ban adult-child sex, or incest.
5. All sex laws should be abolished, especially laws against obscenity, allowing some limited laws against violent, forcible rape.
6. Early sex activity helps children have better marriages later.
7. All people, including children, are naturally bisexual and 10 percent to 37 percent of men are more homosexual than heterosexual.
8. All sodomy is healthy and natural for adults, and hence for children.

Dr. Reisman tells the crowd that marketers have known for years that 2.5 percent of a society are the movers and shakers who can control or alter a nation. She says Kinsey used a media blitz promoting his findings—plus funding from powerful foundations and the pornography industry—to influence that 2.5 percent to move America from the Judeo-Christian Law of sexual morality to his own amoral standard of behavior. And he did it in just two generations.

"We must begin now to form the 2.5 percent needed to take back our country from the Kinsey sexual anarchists," she says firmly. "Concerned Women for America (an organization of 600,000 Christian women) renewed the call for a Congressional investigation of the Kinsey Institute. We ask that you would support that call."

The gray-haired grandmother finishes her presentation quietly.

"You represent some of the most powerful men in Louisville and Kentucky. We look to you to move out smartly to remove Kinsey's cold, dead hands from our children's schools. Remember, if your child's school has an 'enlightened view of sexuality,' Kinsey is there."
