YES TO BURTON, NO TO KINSEY: Rep. Woody Burton, R-Greenwood, urges the House to pass a resolution that opposes state funding for the Kinsey Institute. Among those listening were House GOP Leader Paul Mannweiler (front, center) of Indianapolis.

Resolution urges end to Kinsey funding

It seemed as if the nays had it Wednesday when the Indiana House voted on a resolution urging lawmakers to revoke state funding for the Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender and Reproduction.

But that's not the way it worked out.

Introduced by Rep. Woody Burton, R-Greenwood, the resolution passed after a ruling by House Speaker John R. Gregg, D-Sandborn.

The ruling came even though opponents of the measure sounded louder than supporters during a voice vote.

Although House Majority Leader Mark Krizan, D-Bloomington, disagrees with Burton's proposal, he didn't challenge the outcome.

"My recommendation was to let it go because it doesn't do anything," said Krizan, whose district is home to the Indiana University-based institute.

The resolution is merely a recommendation and does not have the effect of law. Krizan said he would be prepared to do battle when funding for the institute becomes a budget issue, possibly next year.

Burton and other conservatives are angry about allegations that the institute's founder, Alfred Kinsey, based some of his research on information obtained from sexual deviants, sex criminals and children.

The resolution says public funds shouldn't be used to support institutions that "further the claims made by Alfred Kinsey's research."

In addition, the resolution demands that the institute:

- Disclose Kinsey's research design and methods for experiments on minors.
- Identify the gender and age of minors.
- Identify the location of the experimenta.

■ Disclose the methods used by Kinsey and his colleagues.

"I'd like to see Indiana University disclaim Kinsey," Burton said. "A lot of the things he did were totally out of line with today's standards."

Burton met for more than an hour recently with the institute's director, John Bancroft, and IU's vice president for public and governmental affairs, Christopher Simpson.

But he isn't satisfied.

"I think they're trying to hide some of the things that he did do," Burton said.

For Peg Bishop, area director for Concerned Women of America, the issue is clear enough: Most sex education classes are based on research conducted by Kinsey.

"We don't want our taxpayers having to pay for research like this," Bishop said.

Bancroft could not be reached for comment Wednesday. But in an extensive response posted on the Internet, he said Burton and others want to close the institute because of Kinsey's controversial work 50 years ago.

"Whether the Kinsey Institute was doing important and useful work today was apparently irrelevant," he said.

Bancroft said Kinsey can be criticized for using information about children's sexual responses obtained from people who were criminally involved with children.

Before his death in 1956, Kinsey hoped to finish a study based on interviews with small children conducted in the presence of their parents.

"He was not involved in any form of sexual experimentation involving children, nor were any of his colleagues at the institute," Bancroft said.

While Burton's resolution passed the House, legislation that actually attempts to deny funding to the institute is headed for oblivion.

Senate President Pro Tempore Robert D. Coston, R-Columbus, said he will deny the bill a hearing, effectively killing it. The measure is sponsored by Sen. John M. Waterman, R-Sheffburn.

HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

A CONCURRENT RESOLUTION urging the general assembly not to appropriate public funds to support the research of the Kinsey Institute of Indiana University.

Whereas, The research of Alfred Kinsey, the founder of the Kinsey Institute of Indiana University, was based upon data derived from sexual deviants, sex criminals, and children;

Whereas, Today's Kinsey Institute stands behind the research conducted 50 years ago by Alfred Kinsey and promotes the ideology of Kinsey that all sexual contacts are legitimate;

Whereas, Research employing criminal acts to obtain data in the name of science, especially sex crimes against children, should be denounced; and

Whereas, No public funds should be used to operate or support institutions that further the claims made by Alfred Kinsey's research: Therefore,

*Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana,
the Senate concurring:*

1 SECTION 1. That on the 50th anniversary of the Kinsey Institute, 2 it is incumbent upon the Kinsey Institute to fully disclose all of the 3 following information to the public, whose funds are being used to 4 support the Institute:

Prohibition of Public Funding of the Kinsey Institute.

(a) No public funding shall be used for the administration, operation, and programs of the Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender, and Reproduction, located on the campus of Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana, and hereinafter referred to as the "Kinsey Institute." For purposes of this section, "public funding" includes any funding, direct or indirect, provided through or by Indiana University, or from any other source utilizing public funds.

(b) "Administration, operation, and programs" of the Kinsey Institute shall be defined as any of the following with respect to the Kinsey Institute:

- (1) any on-campus or off-campus facilities provided for the use of the Kinsey Institute or any program or activity which it sponsors;
- (2) any equipment, furniture, furnishings, or office supplies used by the Kinsey Institute for any purpose;
- (3) any land or property;
- (4) any utilities;
- (5) any advertising, listings, or any promotional materials included in Indiana University literature or media presentations;
- (6) any loans, grants, special accounts, or funds;
- (7) any programs, special projects, or research;
- (8) any maintenance of facilities;
- (9) any administration costs, operation costs, rentals, or mortgages;
- (10) any materials;
- (11) any printing, duplicating, or copying;
- (12) any publications of materials;
- (13) any restoration, maintenance, or housing of Kinsey Institute research documents, including photographs, audiovisual tapes or films, and printed materials;
- (14) any exhibits or displays, public or private.

(c) Violation of this section shall constitute a Class A misdemeanor.

Kinsey's Legal Legacy

America's post-World War II generation lived through the sexual revolution of the 1960s. Now, sadly, most of them are living with the consequences of its devastation: abortion, skyrocketing disease, divorce, and sexual dysfunction. Most Americans are unaware that their nation's moral foundation was supplanted, nor do they appreciate that a deliberate effort was engineered to derail American common law, which was constructed on biblical principles to protect and order society's most important building blocks — marriage and family.

Fifty years ago this month, Indiana University zoologist and Rockefeller grantee Alfred Kinsey, the widely acknowledged "father of the sexual revolution," published his unprecedented report on human sexuality, Sexual Behavior in the Human Male. Kinsey's theme of "free love" was reinforced by a well-timed media blitz, and the American public was receptive. For the next decade, Kinsey was one of the nation's most popular celebrities (until his premature death in 1956). Cole Porter's hit song popularized Kinsey's sexual liberating anthem of "Anything Goes." But over the second half of the 20th century, America and the Western world learned the hard lesson that, seductive though it be, free love is not free.

In 1954, Tennessee Congressman B. Carroll Reece could clearly see that revolutionary changes were forming on the horizon of our nation's social landscape, and that a principal source of the change was foundation grants encouraging collectivism and internationalism. When Reece began to investigate Kinsey's report and the background of its funding, he discovered a trail leading back to the Rockefeller Foundation. While the Reece Committee was stopped by a bipartisan effort from further investigation, it did offer the following warning regarding the enlarging mission of social scientists in changing our society:

... that there are no absolutes, that everything is indeterminate, that no standards of conduct, morals, ethics, and government are to be deemed inviolate, that everything, including basic moral law, is subject to change, and that it is the part of the social scientists to take no principle for granted as a premise in social or juridical reasoning, however fundamental it may hereto have been deemed to be under our Judeo-Christian moral system.

Kinsey: Working for an amoral new order.

Kinsey was a vital agent in the transformation of America. The Russian, German, and French revolutions were all preceded by an embrace of sexual anarchy. In such revolutionary models, marriage is undermined first, then the family, followed by private property and governments. Kinsey facilitated, with the fraudulent data of his "studies," the abandonment of absolutes in the "social or juridical reasoning" of America's "Judeo-Christian moral system."

A recent Kinsey biography by James H. Jones, a Rockefeller grantee and former adviser to the Kinsey Institute, reveals that Kinsey himself was a sado-masochistic homosexual on a perverted mission. Trolling through homosexual bars and nightclubs, Kinsey gathered the subjects for his research, drawing disproportionately from those participating in sexual perversions and other criminal acts. Those acts were then portrayed by Kinsey as both commonplace and natural. Kinsey's mission, Jones writes in Alfred Kinsey: A Public/Private Life, was to free America from Victorian "repression." But his wider goal was an amoral new order — possible only if human life is unhinged from the divine.

Kinsey, like Margaret Sanger and population planners of the early 20th century, was a eugenicist who eschewed biblical standards of morality. According to one Kinsey associate: "Kinsey knew a great deal about the Judeo-Christian tradition and he was indignant about what it had done to our culture."

How did the acceptance of criminal sexual behaviors and perversions begin in America? Kinsey's studies were accepted as "scientific authority" to alter the American common law view of marriage. Life's most intimate and personal act was equated with degenerative behaviors as long as it was done between "consenting adults."

Kinsey found help in his effort from liberal French lawyer Rene Guyon of "sex by age eight or else it's too late" infamy. Dr. Harry Benjamin, an international sexologist and an associate of both Kinsey and Guyon, wrote in the introduction to Guyon's 1948 book Sexual Ethics:

Many ... sex activities, illegal and immoral, but widely practiced, are recorded by both investigators ... Guyon speaking as a philosopher, and Kinsey, judging merely by empirical data ... [upset] our most cherished conventions. Unless we want to close our eyes to the truth or imprison 95% of our male population, we must completely revise our legal and moral codes.... It probably comes as a jolt to many, even open-minded people, when they realize that chastity cannot be a virtue because it is not a natural state.

With such philosophical inspiration, Guyon developed a deconstructed legal theory, fortifying it with Kinsey's "scientific" data. It was put into the hands of legal radicals like Morris Ernst, an advocate for the new sexual order, who handled revolutionary cases in his war against the American legal order.

Ernst was well credentialed as a legal radical for his service as the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) attorney for Alfred Kinsey, the Kinsey Institute, the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States (SIECUS), and Planned Parenthood of America. He had close ties to Supreme Court Justices Brandeis, Brennan, and Frankfurter, and Judge Learned Hand — all influential progressives in moving American law away from the absolute "Judeo-Christian moral system" which protected the sanctity of life, marriage, and family.

In Ernst's 1948 book American Sexual Behavior and the Kinsey Report, Kinsey colleague Robert Dickinson noted that "an era of hush-and-pretend in the life of our nation may end" through Kinsey's Sexual Behavior in the Human Male and that "virtually every page of the Kinsey Report touches on some section of the legal code ... a reminder that the law, like ... our social pattern, falls lamentably short of being based on a knowledge of facts."

Ernst explained in Scientific Monthly why the Kinsey reports were making major inroads in changing American law: "[R]ecently law has reached for scientific tools to aid in its search for truth.... I now say that the Kinsey Report is the single greatest contribution of science to the rule-making part of the law in my lifetime.... The Kinsey Report broke through a mass of taboo."

Ernst advised that every bar association in the country "should establish a Committee on the Laws of Sexual Behavior and consider its own State's legal system in this field...." Soon Committees were established with funding from the Rockefeller Foundation in an effort to overturn the American way of life.

In 1955, the Model Penal Code was completed under the auspices of the Carnegie- and Rockefeller-seeded American Law Institute (ALI), the education arm of the American Bar Association. This "model" was then submitted to state legislatures for their consideration, with plenty of authoritative support for its implementation provided by Kinsey's flawed scientific analysis. Adoption of the Model Penal Code eliminated and/or trivialized prior sex offenses, eventually aiding the reduction of penalties for abortion, rape, wife and child battery, desertion, seduction, adultery, prostitution, contributing to the delinquency of a minor, soliciting for masturbation, sodomy, public sexual exhibitions, "unfit" parentage, alienation of affection, and obscenity, as well as infanticide, premeditated AIDS/STD transmission, etc.

At the very time the ALI's Model Penal Code was being developed, there was a growing public outcry for tightening, not loosening, sexual psychopath laws. But respected magistrate Morris Plascowe, the model code's principal author, argued (based on Kinsey's findings of course) that "When a total clean-up of sex offenders is demanded, it is, in effect, a proposal to put 95 percent of the male population in jail.... Of the total male population 85 percent has had pre-marital intercourse...."

Trolling through homosexual bars and nightclubs, Kinsey gathered the subjects for his research, drawing disproportionately from those participating in sexual perversions and other criminal acts.

As America's common law was supplanted, legal penalties were "lightened" and new sentencing guidelines were developed. For example, prior to Kinsey rape was extremely serious, a death sentence being required in three states and life in prison in over 18 states. But Plascowe introduced to the legal profession what Kinsey and Guyon had certainly envisioned:

One of the conclusions of the Kinsey report is that the sex offender is not a monster ... but an individual who is not very different from others in his social group, and that his behavior is similar to theirs. The only difference is that others in the offender's social group have not been apprehended. This recognition that there is nothing very shocking or abnormal in the sex offender's behavior should lead to other changes in sex legislation.... Penalties should be lightened. In the first place, it should lead to a downward revision of the penalties presently imposed on sex offenders.

Biographer James Jones reports that Kinsey died believing that his crusade to promote more enlightened sexual attitudes had not succeeded. Yet in 1957, a year after Kinsey's death, the Supreme Court in Roth v. U.S., a case handled by Ernst, relaxed the once protective American legal definition of obscenity. In 1961, Illinois became the first state to repeal its sodomy statute, and today less than half of the states retain sodomy statutes. In 1973, Dr. Mary Calderone, a leading Kinseyan, was cited in the Roe v. Wade decision which legalized abortion. Since Roe a staggering 34 million babies have been aborted. Also in 1973, the American Psychiatric Association removed homosexuality from its list of psychopathologies, and in 1995, pedophilia was removed. Today, Kinsey's fingerprints are all over the current literature of law, medicine, and the social sciences. For example, in Westlaw, a database of the major national law journals, during the period 1982-96, 499 authors cite Kinsey versus 71 citations for the more recent Kinseyans, Masters and Johnson. In the Science Citation and Social Science Citation Indices, Kinsey rates thousands of listings, twice as many as Freud.

Continued belief in and use of Kinsey's data may be viewed as a contributing factor to the current exhaustion of our criminal justice system. Authorities who permit the killing of the unborn and release sadistic rapists/murderers back into society, to typically repeat their crimes, represent a system adrift in an amoral abyss and bent on anarchy and national destruction. ■

RSVP AMERICA

Restoring Social Virtue & Purity to America

From: Eunice Ray, RSVP America

Re: Dr. Judith Reisman's "Unauthorized Biography" of Alfred Kinsey

Date: November 1997

The recent article on Judith's life work in the National Review cover story is entitled: "Mortal Sins: The Counter Revolution" the sexual revolution was based on a lie. Judith Reisman has spent thirty years uncovering the truth! This article came out after the April Readers Digest Article titled Kinsey, Sex and Lies that went out to 24 Million homes. Additionally there was the Concerned Women's June issue of Family Voice which informed their 500,000 membership about Judith's life work on Kinsey. Dr. Beverly La Haye announced their participation in the RSVP America Campaign on October 2, 1997 on the steps of Congress with 500 mother and grandmothers from across America. Judith's appearance at the national AIM conference was televised 3 time on C-Span in late October. The RSVP America Campaign is an effort of First Principle Inc., of which I am president. The campaign is designed to bring the Institute's work and Dr. Reisman's books and information into wider circulation among parents to protect their own children.

The pressure generated by the above media had brought a "damage control" response in the September 1, 1997 New Yorker magazine which carries a sordid true confession on Kinsey and his "secret life" and radical sexual "liberation" agenda. After reading the New Yorker article Mona Charen commented in her nationally syndicated column;

The truth is...tawdry and pathetic...Kinsey was not only interested in Homosexual encounter-and he had many-but also sadism and masochism.

We are meeting some unprecedented success with this unique RSVP America Campaign because everyone understands there has been serious harm and problems caused by America's moral decline. So not surprisingly everyone - whether they are liberal or conservative on the "below the belt" issues-now admits America is experiencing toxic levels of promiscuity, sexual disease, marital dysfunction and because as Judith says "with bad data, you get bad results." The "sexual revolution" spawned by Alfred Kinsey's 1948 "scientific" reports has touched every child and every family, but very few know that the Kinsey Reports were based on fraud and lies.

influence on changing long established protective America Laws, altered our institutions and attitudes which, has left women and children hurting and more vulnerable. RSVP America intends, among other things, to reveal and explain to Americans; normal fathers and mothers, what Kinsey and his "trained observer" pedophiles did to those 317 infants and boys in Table 34 documented on page 180 of Kinsey's first report. I know you will also be fighting mad and want to help Judith privately publish her life's work on Kinsey.

For example, I went Memphis to talk to leading ladies to enlist them in the campaign. They are particularly concerned because in Memphis 6th grade children were taught about bestiality in school. Kinsey reported that sex with animals was on a par with any and all other forms of sexual expression, including marriage so why not? It is unbelievable really! A Memphis mother was furious and brought this matter to general attention. This is the work of RSVP!

However, we have run into a roadblock. Now, with the reality of enormous public interest because of the upcoming 50th Anniversary of the Kinsey Reports in 1998 - Judith Reisman's former publisher has suddenly declined to reprint her best selling book, Kinsey, Sex and Fraud. It is hard to understand why Judith, as a long time authority on the Kinsey reports, is being denied access to the public when the public demand and media interest in Kinsey is accelerating because Americans are looking for answers and the whole TRUTH. Everyone is interested in talking about how we lost our virtue and how to restore common sense thinking and American standards to protect our children..

An army of mad mothers is mobilizing, trained by RSVP. They will be trained to act in order to protect their own children and they need Judith's "unofficial" Kinsey biography to force public investigation of Kinsey to debunk him and then, most importantly, defund the harmful and publicly funded Kinseyan based programs. Whether at the grass roots or the state or federal level, parents must have an authoritative source of facts, figures and proper documentation on Kinsey's fraudulent and criminally derived data to accomplish their mission, to protect their own children.

Everyone says, that's easy, go to a publisher with her manuscript and get those moms and dads what they need! Over the last two years we have done just that to no avail. Through the help of devoted supporters of Judith - with friends in some of the largest publishing houses - Judith's manuscripts were hand delivered to publishers for their consideration. All spoke glowingly of her Kinsey book. One publisher even said it would be an "international bestseller." But no, no, no, that does not mean they will publish her book! Whatever the reason, Judith Reisman's Kinsey information is not available and the healing truth is being kept from parents.

Judith, as always is inundated and working furiously to put the final touches on her seminal Kinsey book which we are trying to help her privately publish. Judith knows her book must come out in the fall/winter of 1997 publisher or not because her new book is the vital weapon to help mothers and fathers protect their children and Restore Social Virtue and Purity to America. The "official" biography by James Jones on Kinsey came out this month. We are truly in a battle for the truth and our children, and the sex industry is covering up with lies and by rewriting the history of Kinsey's harmful impact on American life and our children.

Judith does not easily ask for help, so we continue on soliciting support for her new work because you cannot keep a good woman down and this is an extraordinary time and it calls for extraordinary measures. The pen is mightier than the sword! It is largely grandmothers who are coming forth to stand next to grandmother Judith as they move to equip the foot soldiers in the war, to protect children and protect American virtue - that is, MOMS - with the vital weapon they need to eliminate Kinsey in their own homes, schools, communities and states.

Thankfully, we have raised some funds necessary to edit, layout, and design the first edition of at least 10,000 copies which includes 2,000 review copies. Now we only need the $30,000 cost of printing the first edition. Please help now if there is anything you can do in bringing Judith's life work for our children forward.

The Announcement of the RSVP America Campaign

Kinsey's 50th Anniversary and America's Golden Opportunity

"Look how we've used the Kinsey data. We've used it for everything from assessing the stability of marriage to raising children to trying to understand human growth and development -- not just sexual but also psychological growth and changes over time."

Carol Cassel, Contemporary Sexuality, Monthly newsletter of the American Association of Sex Educators, Counselors and Therapists; October 1991:1

Eunice Ray, a founder of RSVP America, will join with Dr. Beverly LaHaye, CWA founder and chairman of the board, Dr. Judith Reisman, President of the Institute for Media Education and Carmen Pate, vice-president of Communications for CWA, on the Capitol steps on October 2, 1997 at 10:30 a.m. Together they will call for a federal investigation of the publicly funded and seriously flawed Kinsey Reports.

The Kinsey Reports contain "skewed" research and criminally derived data which have been influential in changing American law and public policy. A primary reason for the call for an investigation is the sexual abuse of infants and young boys detailed in "Table 34" of Kinsey's own book Sexual Behavior in the Human Male. Mrs. Ray said that, "Human sex experimentation on children violates all standards of human decency and use of any data obtained without informed consent should be prohibited."

The RSVP America Campaign is a grass roots campaign designed by Ms. Ray which is being promoted by Concerned Women for America (CWA), the largest women's organization in America, to its more than half million activist members across the land. RSVP America answers how America has gone from "Chastity to Condoms" in the baby boom generation. The Campaign will expose to parents the destructive influence of Alfred C. Kinsey, particularly in the sex-education of their children. According to Mrs. Ray, "The Kinseyan model of "anything goes" sexuality has been harmful, unhealthy and demoralizing to the nation and costly for the tax payer."

RSVP America is proud to join its information campaign with the organizational strength of Concerned Women for America, as together they supply America's mothers and fathers with the crucial information and tools to analyze and remove the extremely destructive Kinseyan Model from the lives of their own children.

Beverly LaHaye

& CWA:

'BRING KINSEY DOWN!'

STAND WITH ME!

"Children are sexual. Any kind of sex, with anyone, at any age, is healthy and normal."

From sitcoms to scientific findings, from courtrooms to classrooms—this perverted worldview has permeated our culture.

Pedophiles, rapists and adulterers use it to justify criminal behavior. Pornography becomes "healthy." Clinics perform abortions on minors without their parents' consent. Juvenile males gang-rape, while girls murder their babies in toilet stalls.

All these outrages are rooted in Dr. Alfred Kinsey.

Fifty years ago, certain sexual behaviors were taboo. Then in 1948, Dr. Kinsey—a zoologist—published Sexual Behavior and the Human Male—a book which "proved" humans are sexual from birth, and orgasm is the sole purpose of sex. Kinsey's disciples concluded that any sex act—from masturbation to bestiality—is good.

And Kinsey had help. Agents like Planned Parenthood, Playboy, and the Sex Information and Education Council of the U.S. spread the word.

By 1996, over 50% of girls experienced intercourse before age 18—and 35% of pregnant teens aborted their babies. Rape skyrocketed. And nearly one in five stepfathers committed incest.

"Homosexuality,

from our children."

Are you sick of sexy Disney heroines? Have you had it with public schools telling your kids gay is okay? Does pornographic TV fare make you mad?

Beverly LaHaye urges: "Stand with me!"—in prayer and in person. "With your help, we can bring Kinsey down!"

D.C. on October 2—the first day of our National Convention—to stand with Beverly LaHaye on the steps of the U.S. Capitol. There, she will unveil Concerned Women for America's plan to overthrow Kinsey's legacy.

RSVP CWA TAKES ON KINSEY

To offset the pseudo sex education permeating our culture, CWA has launched the R.S.V.P. Campaign. The Restoring Social Virtue and Purity to America Campaign is targeting Kinsey's model of human sexuality.

More about Kinsey's secret life and fraudulent research is emerging. In August, Kinsey biographer James H. Jones wrote an article in The New Yorker magazine. Jones, who served on the Kinsey Institute's board of advisors, validates the findings of researcher and author, Judith Reisman, Ph.D.

Dr. Reisman is the academic whistleblower who first revealed Kinsey's deadly sex secrets in 1981. For more than two decades, she has investigated Kinsey's fraud—seeking grassroots support for a congressional inquiry. Reisman is the only credible scholar capable of fully exposing Kinsey. Her research and input are integral to CWA's campaign.

Target Kinsey!

CWA plans to discredit, debunk and defund Kinsey by:

- Exposing crimes committed by researchers at the Kinsey Institute
- Exposing Kinsey as the fraudulent "scientific" basis of publicly funded sex education—and AIDS prevention—programs in the United States
- Promoting legislation that will defund every Kinsey-based program
- Publishing the failure of his "grand scheme" using public health data
- Removing Kinsey from our education and legal systems

RSVP at the Grassroots

CWA's Area Representatives (ARs) will designate one person to serve as Task Force Coordinator (TFC) at the Steering Committee level.

The Coordinator will:

- ★ Report to the AR
- ★ Utilize Prayer Action Chapters (PALs) and Home Team Captains (HTCs)
- ★ Recruit School Community Leaders (SCLs)

Moms on the homefront will:

- ★ Determine the authorities being cited and materials being used in our schools.
- ★ Determine who is instructing K-12 students about human sexuality—in public, private and parochial schools
- ★ Go before school boards
- ★ Monitor school curricula
- ★ Help implement new curricula to restore purity and virtue

ARs and TFCs will gather state legislation to see what is mandated for sex education or family life curricula

CWA's National Office and ARs will prepare state and federal legislation to remove Kinsey's fraudulent sex education

KINSEY:

In 1948, the Institute for Sex Research at Indiana University was led by eugenicist Alfred C. Kinsey, whose sex research shook America's moral foundations and launched the 1960s Sexual Revolution. Fifty years later new revelations confirm Dr. Judith Reisman's 1981 expose of scientific fraud and criminally derived data contained in the publicly funded Kinsey Reports. Dr. Reisman revealed that Kinsey conducted human experiments in a soundproof laboratory built to his specifications at Indiana University, and that the sexual abuse of at least 317 infants and young boys was a scientific protocol for Kinsey's 1948 report. Dr. Reisman discloses for the first time the ongoing consequences to the American people and the world based on Kinsey's deliberately skewed research. Kinsey died in 1956 but his Institute endures today under the expanded title of "The Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender and Reproduction," suggesting an even more ominous threat to human rights and liberty.

Crimes & Consequences

1997 HIGHLIGHTS AND SPECIAL EVENTS

CONGRESS TO INVESTIGATE THE CRIME AND FRAUD OF THE KINSEY REPORTS AND THE DEVASTATION KINSEY HAS WROUGHT. WE SAID, "NO MORE PUBLIC FUNDS FOR PROGRAMS AND AGENCIES RELYING ON THE FRAUDULENT DATA OF ALFRED KINSEY!!"

ON OCTOBER 25, 1997, JUDITH REISMAN MADE HER CHARGES OF CRIME AND FRAUD AGAINST KINSEY AND THE KINSEY INSTITUTE AT BLOOMINGTON, INDIANA COURTHOUSE, WHERE KINSEY SHOULD HAVE BEEN PROSECUTED FOR HIS CRIMES. ON OCTOBER 2, 1997, I JOYOUSLY STOOD WITH OVER 500 CONCERNED WOMEN FOR AMERICA LEADERS FROM ACROSS THE COUNTRY AND ASKED

DR. JUDITH REISMAN SPEAKING AT THE CWA INDIANA RALLY. OVER TWO HUNDRED PEOPLE GATHERED ON A RAINY DAY IN BLOOMINGTON, INDIANA.

1997 HIGHLIGHTS AND SPECIAL EVENTS

January 1997 Judith Spoke to Tennessee Congressman and Tennessee business and civic leaders about the Kinsey frauds and examines the Tennessee state mandated "Life-time Wellness (sex ed) Curriculum finding that it did not fulfill spirit or the letter of THE TENNESSEE "FAMILY LIFE INSTRUCTION ACT" OF 1989.

March 1997 Judith addressed the Southern Baptist Ethics and Religious Liberty Committee National Conference. The E&RLC Director Dr. Richard Land asked Judith to address the 1998 Annual Meeting in Charleston, South Carolina on Human Sexuality., March 2-4, 1998.

April 1997 April Reader's Digest Article carried an article titled Kinsey, Sex and Lies about Kinsey's fraud and Judith's discovery that went out to 27 million homes.

May 1997 Judith Reisman's life work was the National Review cover story recently entitled: "Mortal Sins: The Counter Revolution; the Sexual Revolution was based on a lie. Judith Reisman has spent thirty years uncovering the truth!"

June 1997 Concerned Women's June issue of Family Voice "Unmasking Kinsey," informed CWA's 500,000 membership about Judith's life work on Kinsey.

Summer 1997 Eunice Ray spoke in Nashville and Memphis to leading ladies to enlist them in the RSVP Campaign. Mothers are particularly concerned because in Memphis 6th grade children were taught about bestiality in school. The authority to do this comes from Kinsey who reported that sex with animals was on a par with any and all other forms of sexual expression, including even marriage so why not? It is unbelievable really! A Memphis mother was furious and brought this matter to general attention. This is the work of RSVP America

Summer 1997 Judith works tirelessly to finish her book, Kinsey: Crime and Consequence

August 1997 Judith testified before Kentucky legislators on the "gay marriage" issue at historic Joint House/Senate Judiciary Committee hearing in Frankfort, Kentucky.

September 1997 The pressure generated by the above national publicity effort by Dr. Reisman brought a "damage control" response in the New Yorker magazine entitled "Dr. Yes" which carries a sordid true confession on Kinsey and his sadistic "secret life" which drove Kinsey's radical sexual "liberation" agenda to transform America. After reading the New Yorker article Mona Charen commented in her nationally syndicated column;

The truth is...tawdry and pathetic...Kinsey was not only interested in Homosexual encounters- and he had many[calling them sexual research]-but also sadism and masochism.

October 1, 1997 Judith appear on NET television show at the Free Congress Foundation re: Kinsey.

October 2, 1997 Dr. Beverly La Haye and Eunice Ray announced CWA's participation in the RSVP America Campaign on the steps of Congress with 300 mothers and grandmothers from across America. Demanding Kinsey be discredited for his crimes against children and scientific fraud. The RSVP America Campaign is a national effort of First Principles, Inc., of which Eunice Ray is President, designed to bring Dr. Reisman's books and crucial Table 34 discoveries into wider circulation among parents to protect their own children

October 3, 1997 Judith Reisman addresses the CWA national convention and for the first time reveals Kinsey's substantial impact on law and public policy over the past 50 years to the great detriment of women.

October 1997 Judith appeared at the national Accuracy In Media conference which was televised on C-Span in late October..

October 1997 The "official" biography by James Jones, a Kinsey Institute Insider, on Kinsey is released. We are truly in a battle for the truth and our children, and the sex industry is trying to characterize Kinsey and his work the best way possible.

October 1997 CWA Indiana invites Judith to march with them on the Kinsey Institute and demand that it be "EXPOSED AND CLOSED." Judith EXPOSED the truth about Kinsey at the Court house steps where Kinsey's crimes should have been prosecuted.

October 1997 Judith addresses the 500 member Louisville Rotary Club which is reported across Kentucky is secular and church papers.

AMERICA

CAMPAIGN UPDATE, JUNE, 1998

1. The 500,000 member strong Concerned Women for America (CWA) has committed to join with RSVP to promote the national campaign to tell America's mothers the truth about Kinsey's fraud, his criminally derived data in Table 34 and significant and continuing harm to our children then and today. CWA's promotion of the campaign nationwide has and will continue to greatly assist the nation's RSVP campaign effort to expose Kinseyan sexual ideology and its deviating impact in the second half of the 20th century, especially on abolishing Christian moral principles in the laws of every state in America.
2. Dr. Richard Land of Nashville also invited Judith to address the annual meeting of Christian Life Commission in Charleston, South Carolina, on March 2, 3, 1998. The conference focused on human sexuality, and coincided with the 50th anniversary of the first Kinsey Report in 1948. Judith also conducted workshops and each was well attended. (Audio tapes are available – call 1 (800) 837-0544 to order one.) Other speakers at the national CLC conference included South Carolina Governor, David Beasley. As a follow-up, Dr. Richard Land's office wrote two articles in Light magazine on Dr. Reisman, which are included. This publication goes out to 40,000 SBC churches. Dr. Land expects to continue to communicate and proclaim the truth about Kinsey to the Southern Baptist Convention Churches over the next year when Dr. Reisman will be giving a two hour keynote address.
3. Eunice Ray addressed 150 CWA State Leaders at a National Leadership Conference on April 24, 25, 1998, in Dallas Texas and received a standing ovation and their pledge to do all possible in their communities to create awareness of the threat and take out Kinsey!
4. As far as the effort to have a Congressional investigation into Kinsey's fraud, lies and criminally derived data, Colonel Ray has already briefed several key Congressmen and is preparing them for introducing legislation. Meetings were arranged and included Congressmen Roscoe Bartlett, Ron Paul, Ron Lewis and Senators Bill Frist, Fred Thompson, and Mitch McConnell.
5. Eunice and Ron Ray assisted Judith in publishing and distributing her seminal Kinsey work entitled Kinsey: Crimes & Consequences. Judith's first edition of 5,000 books have been widely distributed to friends and supporters in many states, but most had to be given away for review and to activists.
6. Since 1998 is the 50th anniversary of the Kinsey reports this is a great opportunity to cooperate with and educate the 500,000 ladies of Concerned Women for America (CWA) about the harmful consequences of the Kinsey fraud. At least ten percent of CWA's most active moms in all fifty states should receive the RSVP parent's kit this year for use in their communities and in educating their state legislatures. That includes the Children of Table video, the Parents Training Manual, the Curriculum Evaluator and Dr. Reisman's new book, Kinsey: Crimes & Consequences as well as some of the outstanding press coverage of this state and national effort. (Judith's book is available toll free at 1 (800) 837-0544.)
7. With the funds, CWA provides a unique education opportunity to place the RSVP kit in the hands of 80,000 Concerned Women already active or at least 1,500 mad mothers per state. In addition, we are encouraging those CWA mothers and others to personally put the parent's kit into the hands of each of the 7,424 state legislatures serving across America in all fifty states. Also, we have a number of pastors in each state who should receive this information from CWA moms. The personal presentations of the Kinsey fraud contained in the RSVP educational materials ensures accountability and follow up. The combination of educating mothers and preaching in the pulpit thereby teaching parents and the Christians/conservative legislators with the heart to restore God's standard abolished in the states under the authority of Alfred Kinsey, would be very powerful and extremely useful.

UNMASKING ALFRED KINSEY

DR. ALFRED KINSEY, author of the famous Kinsey Report, was quite the interviewer. His biographer, James H. Jones, writing in the Aug. 25 New Yorker, describes how Kinsey, inquiring into the most private and secret sexual histories of his subjects, would ask questions in staccato style so as to deny the interviewee the chance to think of a lie.

MONA CHAREN

Questions presupposed the behavior inquired about. It was, "At what age did you begin masturbating?" — not "Do you masturbate?" When asked how he could tell when a subject was covering up, boasting or lying, Kinsey retorted, "As well ask a horse trader how he knows when to close a bargain."

For thousands of hours, year after year, Kinsey interviewed thousands of people about their sex histories. It was all supposed to be very scientific. Certainly, the language suggested rigorous scientific method. But there were no written records of the interviews, certainly no audio or videotapes. There was no formal questionnaire, just a personal code Kinsey designed to recall what subjects had told him.

Sexual Behavior in the Human Male — sounds downright anthropological, doesn't it? — created a sensation when it was published with the imprimatur of the Rockefeller Foundation. America embraced Kinsey ardently and uncritically. He asserted that deviant sexual behavior was absolutely endemic among teen-age American males, and America believed him — thus undermining the very concept of deviance. (Despite the title, the report did not attempt to study "human" males, only American males growing up in a few East Coast states.) Kinsey made the claim that 10 percent of males were practicing homosexuals, a figure that was widely accepted for two generations. But in 1994, the University of Chicago's National Health and Social Life Survey found that only 2.8 percent of American men could be called bisexual or homosexual.

Though Kinsey was at pains to present himself as a tweedy, middle-American professor and family man, Jones reveals, he was in fact a missionary whose goal it was to release

"The truth is . . . tawdry and pathetic. . . Kinsey was not only interested in homosexual encounters — and he had many — but also in sadism and masochism."

America from the grip of "Victorian" inhibitions about sex. Why? Because Kinsey — wife and four children notwithstanding — was a serious sexual deviant himself.

The truth is about as tawdry and pathetic as Kinsey critics could possibly have imagined in their wildest dreams. Kinsey was not only interested in homosexual encounters — and he had many — but also in sadism and masochism. Jones, who had served as a scientific adviser to Kinsey's Institute for Sex Research, reveals that Kinsey, far from the anti-septic researcher serving science, was actually more of a panting voyeur, pursuing wilder and stranger sexual exploits as his life unfolded.

He trolled through homosexual bars and nightclubs, supposedly seeking subjects for scientific research, but also seeking more private thrills. The subjects of his research were drawn disproportionately from among homosexuals. He had a particular interest in masochists.

At the Institute for Sex Research, Kinsey attempted to create a private sexual utopia, where everyone could have sex with everyone else. Kinsey's wife, Clara, who reportedly worshipped him, acquiesced, apparently even agreeing to be photographed masturbating and having sex with a staff member. There was, according to the wife of another employee, "sickening pressure" to agree to having sex on film.

As for the great man himself, he liked to be filmed — from the neck down — performing masochistic acts on his penis, like inserting pipe cleaners or swizzle sticks.

Toward the end of his life, Kinsey came to believe that there was nothing inherently wrong with sexual encounters between adults and children. It was society's attitude toward such contact that caused trouble.

In the 50 years since the Kinsey Report was published, Americans have behaved more or less as Kinsey would have wished, erasing centuries' old stigmas, jumping into sexual activity at a young age and placing sexual pleasure near the top of the hierarchy of life's goals.

Americans worship experts of every stripe — even to the point of abandoning common sense. Kinsey donned a lab coat and told us that all sexual behavior was "natural" and therefore beyond the reach of traditional morality. It was an absurd claim on its face — theft and murder are natural, too — and now we know that even the data he used were fraudulent. Jones has shown that Alfred Kinsey began the project we now call "defining deviancy down."

Kinsey Report ripped by Concerned Women

LaHaye calls for closure of sex institute

By Amy Fagan
THE WASHINGTON TIMES

The "father of the sexual revolution," Alfred Kinsey, must be exposed as a fraud, Concerned Women for America said yesterday at its national convention.

"Kinsey's early childhood sexuality data is fraudulent and criminally derived, and yet modern sex education is built on the Kinsey model," CWA founder Beverly LaHaye said at the conservative women's convention at the Radisson Hotel in Alexandria.

"I would like to see the Kinsey Institute shut down or at least lose its influence in our country," she said.

Kinsey, who died in 1956, is best known for his studies on human sexuality, made famous by two books: "Human Sexuality and the Human Male" in 1948 and "Human Sexuality and the Human Female" in 1953.

Among other findings, the so-called Kinsey Report said children as young as 2 months old could be sexually active and have orgasms.

Kinsey used a "deviant male sample" on which to base his work, said Judith Reisman, co-author of "Kinsey, Sex and Fraud: the Indocination of a People." His data were derived from a group of prisoners, rapists, homosexuals, pimps, male prostitutes, thieves and others whom he labeled "average American men." The research also was based on documented child sexual abuse conducted by pedophiles, she said.

Officials at the Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender and Reproduction, based at Indiana University, were unavailable for comment yesterday.

The CWA, which has 600,000 members, is joining forces with the Restoring Social Virtue and Purity (RSVP) America Campaign in calling for a congressional investigation and a nationwide grassroots effort to expose Kinsey's fraud and remove his "cold hands" from the United States.

"Sexual freedom without responsibility sounds great. But it has very real consequences."

— Eunice Ray,
RSVP America Campaign

"We want to encourage mothers and fathers to take back their right to educate their children," said Eunice Ray, the campaign's founder.

Mr. Kinsey's findings are taught at every level of education and quoted in textbooks as undisputed truth, Mrs. Reisman said. "There is no human-development specialist who ever before Kinsey said that children or juveniles were desirous of sex pre-puberty or that sexual satisfaction was key to the health of a child," she said.

According to the CWA, the findings have had a major impact.

"All sexual crime laws have undergone change — some radical, some less radical — since the Kinsey Report," said Mrs. Reisman, who also cited increases in sexual abuse and rape.

"Sexual freedom without responsibility sounds great. But it has very real consequences," Mrs. Ray said.

The Kinsey Institute has responded in the past by saying that none of the research took place at the institute and that Kinsey was never interested in sex education.

The convention, which concludes today, covers other issues such as women in the military, pornography, religious persecution and education. Speakers include Elaine Donnelly, the president of the Center for Military Readiness; Rep. Roscoe G. Bartlett, Maryland Republican; Michael Horowitz, the director of the Project on Civil Justice Reform; and Star Parker, the president of the Coalition for Urban Affairs.

Mortal Sins

*The sexual revolution was based on a lie.
Judith Reisman has spent thirty years uncovering the truth.*

TOM BETHELL

JUDITH Reisman was a “red diaper” baby, born in 1935. Her parents were members of the Communist Party and for a while she too belonged to a subversive organization—the Labor Youth League. Much later, when she received a Justice Department grant to examine the role of pornography in sexual abuse, law-enforcement officials knew about her background but weren’t interested. One even told her that it would be easier to give the grant to her than to a white-bread whole-milk member of the Christian Right. Meanwhile the sex-studying, sex-obsessed sexology professionals did see Mrs. Reisman as a threat to their way of life, and they conducted their own investigation. But they weren’t interested in her political background either. Perhaps the whole concept of subversion was too close to home for them.

Judith grew up in Los Angeles in a world of radical politics and bourgeois domesticity. She attended Fairfax High and L.A. City College, went to picnics on the beach. “I lived at a wonderful time,” she said. Her father, Matthew Gelernter, was a Communist Party member and a businessman who later joined the Teamsters Union. He always came home, never drank, always loved her and supported her. Her mother “welcomed me home every day.” They were working for a political revolution but were shocked by the sexual revolution that ensued. In 1954 Judith married a Polish immigrant and within ten years had four daughters. “The hedge of protection about my life was not breached until 1966,” she recalled.

The Reisman family had moved to Milwaukee, and in that year she found out that her 10-year-old daughter Jennie had been raped. The culprit was a 13-year-old boy who lived in the duplex apartment upstairs. It turned out that he had perpetrated many sexual assaults on other children. His father eventually packed him off to relatives overseas, even as his younger brother was embarking on a copycat career of juvenile crime. Mrs. Reisman by then knew that the boys’ father kept a stack of Playboys out in the open at their home. But she was a good 1960s liberal and didn’t think much of it; tacky, yes; stupid, maybe; exploitative, no doubt. But hey, there is such a thing as the First Amendment.

Jennie didn’t want her mother to tell anyone what had happened. Eventually she did tell an aunt, who listened sympathetically and said: “Well, Judy, she may have been looking for this herself. Children are sexual from birth, you know.” Judy was shocked by this and knew it wasn’t true. Then she spoke to an old school chum who had gone to Berkeley. “You know,” Carole said, “she may have been looking for this. Children are sexual from birth.”

Judith Reisman had entered the World According to Kinsey. Chapter five of Kinsey’s first volume, Sexual Behavior in the Human Male, published in 1948, was titled “Early Sexual Growth and Activity.” It claimed that orgasms of infants had been recorded and timed by trained researchers with stop watches. The Kinsey report was then and remains to this day the sole “scientific” source of such claims. But at the time Mrs. Reisman didn’t know anything about this. She produced music videos for public television and went to work for the popular children’s program Captain Kangaroo. Her work was well received, and soon the royalties allowed her to go back to university. She had become interested in the effect of visual images on young minds. The family had moved to Cleveland, and so she enrolled in a PhD program at Case Western Reserve.

One day a male graduate student presented a script for a pornographic video production. The professor in charge assured Mrs. Reisman that all the other students had given their consent. But she couldn’t help noticing that although the female students said the images did not disturb them, “none of the sex photos got onto the videotape correctly.” Denial, born of a fear of seeming unprogressive, was belied by the women’s inability to do the work properly.

Mrs. Reisman began to concentrate on the impact of pornography on women and to give lectures on the subject. In 1977 she was invited to a conference in Swansea, Wales, the topic being “Love and Attraction.” It turned out to be a veiled gathering of pedophiles. One of the speakers, Tom O’Carroll, the leader of the Pedophile Information Exchange, had already received much attention in Britain, having proselytized mightily on TV on behalf of sexual relations with children. The university staff went on strike and said they wouldn't make beds or cook if he was given the podium at Swansea.

Judith Reisman's talk, illustrated with eighty slides, documented her findings of images of children in Playboy and Penthouse. It was as badly received by the professionals as the advocacy of pedophilia had been by the domestics. As she was leaving to catch the London train, a Canadian psychologist quietly took her aside. He said she was probably right that those images would cause "sexual acting out on children." But if she was looking for the cause of the child-sex-abuse epidemic, she should not neglect Edward Brecher's book, The Sex Researcher. Particularly the Kinsey chapter. He had once worked with Kinsey and Pomeroy, he said, and he made unflattering allegations about both. Alfred Kinsey, by the way, died in 1956 at the age of 62, but his co-authors, Wardell Pomeroy, Clyde Martin, and Paul Gebhard, are all still alive.

CHECKING the Kinsey report, Mrs. Reisman could hardly believe what she was seeing. Table 34 of the first volume gave "examples of multiple orgasm in pre-adolescent males," some five months old. Table 31 chronicled attempts to bring to orgasm infants of two months. How was this information collected? According to Kinsey, the researchers were "adult males who have had sexual contacts with younger boys." In fact, Kinsey added, "nine of our adult male subjects have observed such orgasm." Their observations had been "timed with second-hand or stop watch." Over three hundred children were involved. Who were these children, and who were the adult males engaged in this activity? This material had been available for over thirty years in one of the most widely publicized books of the twentieth century. No one before Mrs. Reisman had drawn attention to it.

In the late 1970s, she was offered a job in the sociology department at Haifa University. Two of her children had already moved to Israel, and so she was happy to go. Jennie by then had married a young Israeli. But at the age of 22, a year after giving birth to a daughter, she died of a brain aneurysm. In 1981, Dr. Reisman presented the Kinsey data to a packed session of the Fifth World Congress on Sexology in Jerusalem. In attendance was the "human sexuality brain-trust worldwide," she recalled. Her paper was titled: "The Scientist as a Contributing Agent to Child Sex Abuse: A Preliminary Consideration of Possible Ethics Violations."

She naïvely imagined that the world community of sex experts would react as she had. But that afternoon her assistant from the sociology department returned from lunch with the news that Judith Reisman, not Alfred Kinsey, was the target of outrage. The conference movers and shakers had roundly condemned her paper. Everyone the assistant had spoken to agreed that children could have "loving" relationships with adults. So what was the problem?

Dr. Reisman addressed the conference again two days later. This time she was interrupted by a prominent sexologist called John Money, with a Harvard PhD in psychology. He shouted to the podium that she would "set back the cause of sex education two thousand years," and he told a Swedish television interviewer that she was "Mrs. Hitler." Professor Money had founded the Gender Identity Clinic at Johns Hopkins University, where today he is professor emeritus. He has contributed to the Journal of Paedophilia (published in Amsterdam), and with parental consent has overseen sex-change operations on infants. Recently he has been in the news because a male subject, reconstructed as a female at eight months and injected with hormones, still ended up looking and thinking like a man. (See Washington Post, March 18; John Leo, U.S. News & World Report, March 31.) Professor Money was seeking to validate the feminist philosophy that major sex differences are not determined by genes. Such "sex reassignment" operations have been fairly common, but "the exact numbers are unknown," according to the Washington Post. Judith Reisman ripostes today that if she is Mrs. Hitler, then Money is Dr. Mengele.

In 1983 she appeared on Crossfire with Pat Buchanan and Tom Braden. Wardell Pomeroy appeared at the studio but then refused to appear before the cameras. An official at the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention at the Justice Department saw the program. He mentioned it to his boss, Al Regnery, who "signed off" on a $734,000 grant to investigate the role of pornography and media violence in sexual exploitation and in juvenile delinquency. Mr. Regnery recalled that it "caused us a lot of grief." Indeed, a great furor erupted at this hint of social regression. The recipient of the grant was the American University, and Dr. Reisman, who was given the temporary position of research professor, became the "principal investigator." She received in the end 10 per cent of the money.

The university didn't mind the money but was embarrassed to be associated with a critical look at porn. The Kinsey Institute threatened lawsuits if it was implicated by the research, and Dr. Reisman was ordered by the university to steer clear of the Kinsey reports. Congressional committees held three separate hearings on how such a grant could have been made by the Justice Department, and in the course of one hearing, Dr. Reisman for the first time met the university president, Richard Berendzen. He seemed particularly unfriendly. Their subsequent career paths suggest what strange times we live in.

In 1990 Berendzen was forced to resign as president after he was caught making obscene telephone calls from his office. One woman (of the 15 or so called) happened to be married to a policeman. The repeated phone calls were eventually traced to Berendzen's office. Among many lurid things, he said that he had a "four-year-old 'sex slave' imprisoned in his office," and according to Time he discussed in "graphic detail" having sexual relations with children. He mentioned a child-pornography collection.

Richard Berendzen resigned, was admitted to the Sexual Disorders Clinic at Johns Hopkins, and kept his tenured professorship. In the following year he was the university's highest-paid professor (receiving $261,000). In 1992 he addressed a national conference on child victimization, with particular reference to "survival techniques." By now he had "discovered" that he was the victim. His mother had sexually abused him when he was a child. In his book,

Smoking and Sex

ACCORDING to frequent warnings from the government health-care complex, a single unguarded act of sexual intercourse can expose a person to a deadly virus that will dismantle the body's immune system. A single cigarette, on the other hand, can do no such damage. Despite these very unequal hazards, smoking is now fiercely opposed, while sexual activity of almost any description is encouraged—usually as an aid to mental health. This happens most subversively in sex-ed classes, which President Clinton's former surgeon general, Joycelyn Elders, thought suitable for children in kindergarten.

Smoking is now viewed with the zealous moral disapproval once reserved for the ancient category of sexual deviance. Concern about souls has been transferred to the body, with moral indignation remaining a constant. Judith Reisman suggests a separate parallel: Just as the cigarette makers wanted to get the kids hooked on their product, so the sexologists want to get the kids hooked on theirs.

Is there a conflict between the rising concern about bodily health and encouragement of sexual expression? Condoms will square that circle. They "can be sexy," too, sex educators exult. And like filter-tipped cigarettes they can give a false sense of security. Condoms have a failure rate of over 15 per cent—where failure is measured by pregnancy; twice that where sexually transmitted agents are the test. But don't expect Surgeon General's warnings any time soon. Meanwhile, boatloads of condoms are being shipped to the Third World. Foreigners whom we treat with such disdain can be forgiven for thinking us morally depraved.

Those who are trying to stamp out smoking usually disapprove of sexual abstinence. Here's the latest message on sexually transmitted disease, plastered on buses in several cities earlier this year: "Abstinence Will Not Cure AIDS. Research Will." This was paid for by Amfar, a New York-based AIDS foundation which has enjoyed much socialite support.

Leading sex educators have encouraged sexual experimentation at an age that would cause tobacco executives to blanch. The leading sex-ed organization is SIECUS, the Sexual Information and Education Council of the United States. Chartered in 1964 by Dr. Mary S. Calderone, medical director of Planned Parenthood, it has promoted its agenda under the rubric of children's rights. A few years ago Dr. Calderone said that children have a fundamental right to "know about sexuality and to be sexual." (Her italics.) SIECUS today calls on the national media "to present sexuality as a positive aspect of the total human experience at all stages of the life cycle." (My italics.) Your tax dollars are at work. SIECUS boasted in 1994 that it was "one of the 24 national recipients of a new five-year cooperative agreement with the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention."

Debra Haffner, SIECUS's executive director (lately she has been on sabbatical at Yale Divinity School), wrote a few years ago that "we need to tell teens that the safest sex doesn't necessarily mean no sex." Her list of pressure-relieving activities for kids included "oral sex" and "mutual masturbation." This would "help them delay the onset of sexual intercourse and its consequences." Sex educators view kids, demeaningly, as high-pressure boilers in need of socially constructed safety valves.

Recent goings-on at the Martha Winston Elementary School in Washington, D.C., suggest that the kids have learned their lessons. A fourth-grader who "challenged the authority" of a teacher was sent to an empty classroom. He coaxed several classmates into the room. According to the Washington Times, they "disrobed and practiced sexual acts on one another." The school's principal considered that no disciplinary steps could be taken because the sexual acts—between fourth-graders, ranging in age from 9 to 12—were "consensual."

For those parents who still don't realize what is going on, the point to grasp is that their children are viewed as prey. Perhaps the most striking feature of sex ed is its mendacity. In Slouching towards Gomorrah Robert Bork notes that it seems to operate "more as an incitement" than as a caution against sexual experimentation. Above all, the disparity between the little that we really need to know about intercourse and the lurid array of materials deployed by the sexologists should warn us of an undisclosed agenda. Those (numerous) cases in which parents have been kept in the dark about what is going on, and especially the cases in which children are not allowed to opt out of courses, should teach us the same lesson.

Some local-government posters displayed in classrooms could not possibly be shown in this magazine. In fact, the embarrassment of normal people in dealing with this subject has contributed to a broad news-media blackout about the horrible details. This has enabled the sex educators to take advantage of the very reticence that they are trying to break down. Judith Reisman's parents, old-line Communists, were shocked by the sexual revolution. But then, like Communists everywhere, they aspired to "build a new society." The sexologists have no such reconstruction in mind. Their goal—conscious or not—is merely to destroy the old. —TOM BETHELL

Come Here: A Man Overcomes the Tragic Aftermath of Childhood Sexual Abuse, he describes his obscene phone calls as a form of involuntary "data gathering." Ted Koppel called the book a "genuine service to anyone who cared about the roots and consequences of child abuse." Berendzen finally became chairman of the Advisory Board for the National Center for Survivors of Child Abuse. His wife, Gail, wrote a "survivors" article for Ladies' Home Journal.

Dr. Reisman—who stumbled across child abuse in Kinsey's research, questioned the accuracy of Kinsey's data more generally, and then attempted to examine the adverse effects of pornography—has been vilified from coast to coast. She was run out of American University on the day her grant expired. The money was only half spent and her research was incomplete; but she was denied access to her own database, and her half-finished work was rewritten by unknown hands. For her there was no academic freedom. She appeared as an effective gladiator on a Donahue show (Phil Donahue, to his credit, did not stack the deck against her), and she has not been seen on the big TV shows since. McNeil-Lehrer taped her, but nothing appeared; Bill Moyers wrote letters—again nothing. Attacks on her appeared in Playboy, Penthouse, Hustler, and the American Psychological Association Monitor, in Jack Anderson's column, and in news stories that had all the detachment of a Herblock cartoon. Headlines had a way of imputing the prurient interest in porn to her.

As her experience shows, tolerance is not the all-pervasive dogma of our day, but is specifically withdrawn from people and institutions who behave as if no revolution in sexual mores has occurred, or who obstinately question its wisdom. All the old forces of blackballing, ostracism, and disapproval, once deployed by the orthodox against heterodoxy, are now fiercely arrayed against the counter-revolutionary holdouts. The scattered remnants of orthodoxy know this and know that they will be vilified if they dare to fight. Their prudent instinct is to withdraw into private enclaves, home-school their children, and find a quiet retreat at a safe remove from crime and the federal judiciary.

Judith Reisman, now a grandmother of nine, is still ready to stand and fight, however. Progress has been made in exposing Kinsey's deceptions, she notes. The Washington Post, The Lancet, and Reader's Digest have published articles about the role of pedophiles in producing some of Kinsey's data. The Family Research Council produced an effective video on the subject, and even CBS Evening News did a segment. There is a slow, grudging reappraisal of Kinsey's findings, his methods, and especially his badly skewed samples (1,400 of his 5,300 male subjects were imprisoned sex offenders, for example).

Kinsey's big lie—that he was a scientist, not a moralist, showing what is rather than what ought to be—has at last come under attack. Pomeroy disclosed in his 1973 book that Kinsey was engaged in an ideological mission to undermine the Judaeo-Christian ethic. In 1995, a bill was introduced calling for a congressional investigation to determine if there was "systematic sexual abuse of children" in Kinsey's research. Its main sponsor, Rep. Steve Stockman of Texas, was defeated in the 1996 election, but Rep. Peter Hoekstra of Michigan is said to be still interested.

In the United States, at least, there is no doubt that Kinsey was a more successful revolutionary than Marx or Lenin. One reason is that he didn't proclaim himself to be one. Looking back on her parents' heroes, Judith Reisman thinks that it is very difficult to instill a revolutionary outlook by encouraging young adults to go to the library and read books like Das Kapital. "It doesn't change you," she said. "Not in the way that having an affair can change you. That can radicalize you." Sexuality "reaches in below the belt and takes control of your emotions."

SHE does not believe that there is such a thing as impartial scientific research into sex. She has no doubt that the women's-liberation movement was and endures as a response to the betrayals of the sexual revolution. As for pornography, it "short-circuits the brain" and precludes rational thought. She is surprised that the women's movement has not produced more opponents of pornography like Andrea Dworkin and Catharine MacKinnon.

Judith Reisman's story tells us almost more than we want to know about the inequality of forces in the cultural war. In fact, the image of war is itself misleading. "War implies two opposing armies," Dr. Reisman says. In reality there is only one. The sexual revolution has resembled an incoming tide more than a war. Nothing seems able to resist it, and we can only hope that one day it will turn and move back out to sea. The cultural wreckage left behind will be considerable. Meanwhile the laws have been changed, good habits undermined, the string untuned.

"How can we have been so blind?" Dr. Reisman used to hear her family and friends say when she was young, referring to the Holocaust. "But look at us," she says. "People cannot identify their enemies." Still, she has not lost the gift of optimism. "This country is blessed," she says. "Change is possible. We are supposed to stand up and be counted. Beyond that, it is in God's hands." □

KIDS AND SEX: THE KINSEY CONNECTION

by Vanessa Warner, Research Specialist

and Trudy Hutchens, Director of Research and Publications

The day was April 7, 1997. It began like any other, as children poured into an elementary school in Washington, D.C. The ringing bell echoed through the inner-city hallways, and the children settled into their seats while the fourth-grade teacher began his lesson on test-taking skills. When a student became disruptive, the teacher decided to bar him from the classroom. The student went to an adjoining room and coaxed several other kids to join him there.

What happened in that room has left parents raging and the community astonished. The children, ages 9-12—now out from under the teacher's watchful eye—began playing a game in the darkened room. Their game involved practicing sex on each other.

"When my daughter tried to leave," a distraught mother told The Washington Post, "a boy pulled her back into the room, told her to get down on the floor and that if she told anybody, he would bring a knife to school and cut everybody up." Another parent reported that at least two boys forced oral sex on her daughter.

What is even more appalling than a nine-year-old's sexual experimentation then 6- and 7-year-olds playing doctor can become problematic."

Was the sex consensual? Even if the girls were lying about the force involved, why are officials so unconcerned? Maybe it's because what happened at that particular elementary school is not that uncommon. D.C. Board of Education President Don Reeves said, "If the media wanted to go around and look at other schools; they'd see incidents like that going on all the time."

What has happened to our society? The answer to that question lies with one man and the philosophy he perpetrated. In the 1940s, Dr. Alfred Kinsey revolutionized American culture with his ideas about human sexuality. Today and sexual assault was society's response. The police closed the case within a week, arguing that the children's sex was "consensual" and therefore "no crime had been committed." D.C. law gives its stamp of approval to sex between children—as long as they are within four years of each other in age.

Even the executive director of a D.C. rape crisis center displayed a rather blasé attitude toward the incident. Admitting that fourth graders are generally not ready for sexual intercourse, Denise Snyder remarked: "From a legal perspective, if you try to say consensual sexual activity is illegal,

America is reaping the grim consequences.

MOLESTERS PROVIDE DATA

Zoologist Alfred Kinsey sparked the sexual revolution with his reports on Sexuality and the Human Male (1948) and Sexuality and the Human Female (1953). Although many Americans are unfamiliar with his name, it would be difficult to find a person who has not been touched by his philosophy. Kinsey argued that deviant sexual activity is normal and natural, and that children are sexual from birth. He believed that society should not stifle any sexual activity.

New book exposes Dr. Alfred Kinsey as gay pervert and...

FREE LOVE FRAUD!

— and YOUR kids' sex education is based on his teachings

SEX researcher Alfred Kinsey — whose sex manuals sparked America's free love movement in the psychedelic '60s — was a perverted fraud, reveals an explosive new book.

Instead of an enlightened educator, he was a cruel and warped man, who based his opinions largely on the perversions that brought HIM secret sexual gratification, writes author James H. Jones.

"Kinsey's so-called research was one of the most evil frauds ever conducted under the guise of science," Jones says. "Interviews with his 'subjects' often took the form of having sex with them himself."

Kinsey, who said: "If it feels good, do it," was beset by kinky cravings, Jones adds.

"He was a homosexual and from childhood on, a masochist who pursued an interest in extreme sexuality with increasing compulsiveness," says the author in his shocking new book Alfred C. Kinsey: A Public/Private Life.

Generations of therapists accepted his teachings, says Jones. But his research was horribly skewed because he chose to interview "homosexuals, sadomasochists, voyeurs, exhibitionists, pedophiles, transsexuals, transvestites and fetishists" instead of people who followed

The kinky practices Kinsey forced on his wife Clara led to muddy gropefests at the Woodstock rock festival traditional sex practices.

Sexual Behavior in the Human Male came out in 1948 and was followed by Sexual Behavior in the Human Female in 1953.

Tragically, his crazy findings were incorporated into sex education classes that became part of the curriculum in countless American schools.

His bawdy research also spawned the sexual abandon of the '60s — typified by the 1967 Summer of Love and the orgy-filled Woodstock festival two years later.

One of Kinsey's most extreme claims was that children as young as 3 months are capable of enjoying sex.

His followers continue to maintain that notion, pushing for sex education classes to begin in kindergarten.

In the name of enlightenment, he also encouraged his staff to live in a "sexual utopia," says Jones.

"Male employees could have sex with each other while their wives were free to embrace whatever sexual partners they liked."

Even Kinsey's family became part of his erotic experiments. He converted the attic of his family's Indiana home into a porno studio and persuaded his wife Clara to be filmed having sex with one of his workers, claims the author. One of his milder acts was to have his preteen daughters, Anne and Joan, and his son Bruce watch as he shaved in the nude, says the book. He told them it inspired "positive feelings about the human body."

And contrary to popular opinion, he wasn't even a medical doctor. He held a doctorate from Harvard in the study of gall wasps.

Kinsey died in 1957. But his teachings paved the way for The Pill, free love, more liberal censorship, open marriages and gay liberation. Says Jones: "He resembled a 20th century cult leader with a burning belief in his mission."

KINSEY:

He authored the book that shook America's foundations and launched the sexual revolution. Fifty years later new revelations from those who knew him best now prove Dr. Judith Reisman's findings that Kinsey's research was fraudulent and criminally derived. Dr. Reisman's investigation began with her discovery in Kinsey's 1948 Report of the systematic sexual abuse of at least 317 boys and girls, some as young as 2 months old. Dr. Reisman reveals the continuing harmful consequences to America and the world.

Speaking to Restore Social Virtue and Purity to America

Co-Founder RSVP America

Eunice Van Winkle Ray began her work in national public affairs in March of 1991, when she was appointed by Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney to the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Service, the DACOWITS. During, her three-year service on the DACOWITS, she vigorously fought for American women to retain their right to exemption from service in the combat arms against strong opposition. Mrs. Ray is also the president of First Principles Press.

In 1996, Mrs. Ray co-founded RSVP America, a campaign to Restore Social Virtue and Purity to America. RSVP America provides training and educational materials and is working with Concerned Women for America on a national campaign for mothers and fathers. The campaign mission is to root out the pervasive and fraudulent sex knowledge taught in schools which stands on the criminally derived research of Alfred Kinsey, the “father of the sexual revolution.”

The national campaign began in 1998, the 50 year anniversary of Kinsey’s first book, Sexual Behavior in the Human Male (1948). Mrs. Ray is speaks across the country to church and civic groups about the harmful Kinseyan influence in all American institutions and its adverse impact on our children’s lives. Mrs. Ray is the wife of Colonel Ronald D. Ray, the mother of four and she lives on a small farm in Kentucky.

Restoring Social Virtue & Purity to America

A general dissolution of principles and manners will more surely overthrow the Liberties of America than the whole force of the common enemy. While the people Are virtuous they cannot be subdued; but when they lose their virtue they will be ready to surrender their liberties to the first external or internal invader...If virtue and knowledge are diffused among the people, they will never be enslaved.

Campaign Overview

June 1998

RSVP is a campaign, not another organization. The timing of the campaign is excellent as 1998 is the 50th anniversary of the Kinsey reports. The sexology world is planning to call attention to science's "free love" prophet and his "liberating" impact on American laws, attitudes and life. Kinsey and the "sexperts" have used criminally derived data and fraudulent "scientific authority to replace the fixed American moral authority which once governed the laws of marriage, home and family living prior to 1948. Now all, whether conservative or liberal, agree America is in serious moral decline. The fight over the next few years in American homes, churches and in Congress and state houses promises to be over the best solution to America's marriage and family woes.

In October 1997, Eunice Ray and Concerned Women for America's leaders Beverly LaHaye and Carman Pate kicked off the national RSVP America Campaign on the Capitol steps in Washington, D.C.

- RSVP provides a strategy and campaign structure to train parents to detect the fraudulent and deadly Kinsey model so that they can identify it in their own children's classroom curriculum and act appropriately to protect their own children from harmful and criminally derived information which is "inaccurate" and not "age" or health appropriate.
- The RSVP campaign mission is simple and easy to understand. Expose Kinsey as the fraudulent basis of the Sexual Revolution masquerading as "science" presented to our children in most all publicly-funded sex-ed and AIDS prevention programs.
- The campaign has an offensive strategy. RSVP attacks Kinsey's greatest vulnerability, the human experiments conducted by "trained observer" pedophiles on at least 317 infants and young boys reported in Kinsey's "Table 34," page 180, of his first report, Sexual Behavior in the Human Male. RSVP calls for Kinsey's proponents to defend their anti-virtue and purity view of human sexuality by pointing at the indefensible, Kinsey's trained observers having sexual contacts with infants and children.
- The campaign is aimed at a single target; Kinsey and the adult-child sex experiments reported in his 1948 Report and the ancient pagan roots of the "Kinsey Model" of human sexuality found most prevalently today in the Third World. Kinsey did not bring new light or "science" to bear on America's understanding of sexuality. America has gone back to the dark and Kinsey's model has exacted a terrible toll upon our children and in terms of the breakdown of marriage and the increasing levels of sexual disease, dysfunction and death since 1948. The "Baby Boom" generation has lived through and been harmed by the "sexual revolution," but most do not know how America has gone from "Chastity to Condoms in their generation," but they certainly are very interested.
- Kinsey's disciples are operating in all of America's institutions. America's "educated understanding" of sexuality is Kinseyan, therefore the campaign must be conducted at the grass roots by Moms close to their homes, in their neighborhood schools, for the protection of their own children and, if they choose, to make a difference at the state or national legislative level

The campaign is designed and built on gaining the efforts and support of 2.5% of the population, the leaders, because only 2.5% brought and promoted this tragic era to America. The same number, 2.5%, can, with the right tools, restore America's innocence lost. America was vastly better off before Kinsey, when mothers and fathers were their child's primary instructor in the area of marriage and family living.

COLONEL RONALD D. RAY

Colonel Ray was born in Hazard, Kentucky on October 30, 1942. He received his B.A. from Centre College of Kentucky in 1964, and his juris doctorate, Magna Cum Laude, in 1971 from the University of Louisville School of Law, where he was Salutatorian in his class and an Editor of the Journal of Family Law. Colonel Ray was a partner with Greenebaum, Doll & McDonald for 15 years, and until 1986 headed the Labor and Employee Relations section of the firm. Colonel Ray was Adjunct Professor of Law at the University of Louisville School of Law for many years.

Today Colonel Ray is a practicing attorney with his own firm in Crestwood, Kentucky since 1986, emphasizing constitutional cases, preventive law and defending American liberty from government encroachment.

Colonel Ray is an author and lecturer, whose recent book is entitled Military Necessity & Homosexuality. He writes and speaks on a wide range of subjects and has appeared on national television news and call-in radio shows to discuss public and constitutional issues of national interest such as America's Christian Heritage, illegal U.S. Participation in U.N. military operations, the true relationship between Christianity and Politics, the Second Amendment, history of the Vietnam War and MIA/POWs, and a variety of defense and current policy subjects.

In 1984, Colonel Ray was appointed the first Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (Guard/Reserve) in Washington, D.C., which Pentagon appointment included responsibility for staffing and organizing a national management structure for exercising policy guidance and overall supervision of the 1,800,000 members of this nation's National Guard & Reserve Forces. In 1985, he received the National Eagle Award from the National Guard Association for exemplary public service while in the Pentagon.

In 1964, Colonel Ray was commissioned in the U.S. Marine Corps, serving as a Platoon Leader and one of the first Marine officers ashore for the evacuation of civilians during the Dominican Republic Crisis in April-May, 1965. Colonel Ray later served as an Infantry Battalion Advisor to the Vietnamese Marine Corps in the Republic of Vietnam during 1967-68, participating in combat operations throughout South Vietnam including major joint operations during the TET Offensive, Hue City, Coronado II and Paddington. During his active military service, Colonel Ray was awarded many decorations, including two Silver Stars for gallantry, Bronze Star with Combat "V", Purple Heart, Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry and Vietnamese Honor Medal.

Colonel Ray resigned his active commission in 1969 and joined the Marine Corps Reserve, where he held a variety of command and staff positions, including command of combat and combat service support units in Louisville and Ft. Knox, Kentucky. In 1974, he was certified as a Staff Judge Advocate, and graduated with honors from the Naval Justice School in Newport, Rhode Island, and attended many senior level military schools, the NATO Defense College in England and the National Defense University. He served as Deputy Director for Field Operations for the Division of History and Museums of the Marine Corps. Colonel Ray retired from the Marine Corps Reserve on June 30, 1994, and he is currently working on a history of the Vietnam War.

In 1990, President Bush appointed Colonel Ray to the American Battle Monuments Commission, which is responsible for commemorating the services of American Armed Forces through the erection of memorials and maintaining cemeteries. In 1992, Colonel Ray was appointed by the President to the Commission on the Assignment of Women in the Armed Forces. Colonel Ray founded and served as the Chairman of the Kentucky Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, which privately raised more than one million dollars to build and dedicate a unique granite sundial as a Memorial to Vietnam service in Frankfort, Kentucky.
