WHISTLING IN THE DARK

Delusions die hard, and the delusions of the U.S. Communists are deep and deadly. The following article in the May 1 edition of the U.S. Communist Party newspaper, PEOPLE'S DAILY WORLD, reveals some Communist delusions.

The future is with Marx and Lenin

By Jim West

The life and work of Karl Marx, born 175 years ago on May 5, 1818, were destined to influence the course of events for centuries to come.

His teachings showed that the age-old dream of a life without exploitation, oppression, hatred and war could – and inevitably would – be a reality. That reality would be socialism, the precondition and transition to a truly classless society, communism. What has come to be called Marxism was the great scientific and practical work of Karl Marx and his closest co-worker, Frederick Engels.

Fifty-two years later, on April 22, 1870, Vladimir Ilyich Lenin was born. His work carried Marxism forward to new times and new conditions, when capitalism had grown into imperialism. Under the genius of Lenin's leadership, and barely 20 years into the age of imperialism, the tocsin was sounded heralding the coming of socialism on a sixth of the earth's surface. It showed that imperialism was not here to stay. That socialism could succeed in what had been a backward country, Russia, and hold out for 70 years against the combined intrigues, interventions and subversions of all the imperialist powers is irrefutable testimony to the validity of Marxism as further developed and brought to life by Lenin. That is why it has come to be called Marxism-Leninism.

Today, soothsayers and propagandists of capitalism are proclaiming the "end of ideology," the end of Marxism-Leninism, the death of communism. To be sure, capitalism, with its command of tremendous media facilities, can flood the world with all the lies and myths it wants to. But no amount of capitalist malarkey can long conceal the truth or wipe out people's memories of the truth.

The laws of class struggle developed by Marx, Engels and Lenin are very much alive not only in all capitalist and so-called Third World countries, but also in the former lands of socialism. No opportunists and pseudo-socialists were able to refute and overthrow Marxism-Leninism when Marx and Lenin were alive. And no Gorbachevs, Yeltsins, Yakovlevs and Shevardnadzes can kill Marxism-Leninism today. In fact, that great science is haunting Gorbachev-Yeltsin-Yakovlev-Shevardnadze today as they fight with whatever backing they can get from the capitalist world to bring capitalism back.

In the long view of history, these Russian opportunists will be remembered with a footnote for having opened the door for the young generations in the former Soviet Union to learn the meaning of class struggle as capitalism dishes it out, and to appreciate more fully – and many for the first time – all that their parents had created in the socialism that was built at tremendous sacrifice.

Such was not their intent, of course, but that is the only positive result that can come out of the heinous crimes they have committed against the peoples of the former socialist countries and of the world.

How come, when television shows pictures of villagers and townspeople being interviewed, there, on the wall, is Lenin's picture still? How come the German government was compelled to agree to allow the magnificent statue of Marx and Engels in Berlin's main square to stand, and not be taken down? Because you can kill and overkill by a million times the memory of Marx and Lenin in the media. But you can't eradicate all they mean to the working class, to working people and to the oppressed. They reside deep in the hearts of millions. They are closer to the people today than they ever were in their own lifetimes.

The memory of Marx, Engels and Lenin will outlive capitalism and imperialism. It represents the future. The society of exploitation and oppression, of racism and war has no future.

THE EMPIRE OF EVIL

As you survey the moral situation in the world, and especially in this country, do you sometimes feel a tendency to despair? I confess that I do.

The present situation is grievous, but not unprecedented. The people of God have frequently been surrounded by an environment of great wickedness. As the Psalmist says, "I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay tree."

What an apt description of present conditions in the U.S.A. The abortionists, the sodomists, the pornographers, the murderers, the child abusers, the drug barons and corrupt politicians are wielding great power. The outlook seems well-nigh hopeless.

Let us take heart. After acknowledging the triumph of the wicked, the Psalmist stresses its temporary nature. He says: "Yet he passed away, and, lo, he was not: yea, I sought him, but he could not be found." And, "the salvation of the righteous is of the Lord; he is their strength in the time of trouble."

President Reagan was not ashamed to draw attention to the sin and evil which are in the world, and to call a spade a spade. The public is reminded of this in a critical editorial in the April, 1993, edition of THE BULLETIN OF THE ATOMIC SCIENTISTS. This magazine is published by a group of scientists who were opposed to policies of President Reagan and the attainment of peace by strength. It was these policies which contributed greatly to the lessening of the danger of worldwide nuclear disaster.

The editorial, which is signed by Mike Moore, the Editor of the Bulletin, states:

The Evil Empire

"Some 10 years ago--March 8, 1993, in Orlando, Florida--President Ronald Reagan delivered a remarkable talk. Friends and foes alike quickly dubbed it the 'Evil Empire' speech...

"The president spoke at the annual convention of the National Association of Evangelicals, and he sought to remove the East-West confrontation from the secular world and recast it as a battle between good and evil, as those terms are understood by Christian fundamentalists. 'There is sin and evil in the world,' said the president, 'and we're enjoined by Scripture and the Lord Jesus to oppose it with all our might...

"Let us pray for the salvation of all those who live in that totalitarian darkness--pray they will discover the joy of knowing God. But until they do, let us be aware that while they preach the supremacy of the state, declare its omnipotence over individual man, and predict its eventual domination of all peoples on the Earth, they are the focus of evil in the modern world'...

"The speech was a beautifully crafted work by speechwriter Tony Dolan. It was rhetorically vigorous, internally consistent, and--yes--intellectually challenging. (Its principal topic was human imperfectibility, and how that relates to the battle between secular and spiritual notions of the world.) But its East-West content was chilling, at least to people like me."

I hope I may be pardoned for a sense of satisfaction and pride in the role the Crusade played in the formulation of this speech.

The Crusade had conducted many "anti-subversive seminars" in Washington, D.C. We have granted scholarships to many hundreds of students to enable them to attend these seminars. One of those who attended a seminar was a young student named Tony Dolan. He later became a speech writer for President Reagan. As the editorial states, "The speech was a beautifully crafted work by speechwriter, Tony Dolan."

Tony sent me a copy of the speech with the hand-written note:

MORALITY AND COMMUNISM

A correspondent writes, "What gay and lesbian people have to do with Communism is beyond me." This individual makes me identify with the indignant father who lamented, "I have sent my son to school, and they taught him all they know; I brought him home, and I have taught him all I know; and now he knows nothing."

For 40 years I have stressed, by voice and pen, the close association between Communism and morality. During the years of Soviet might, I published the formula for the conquest of the United States as, "External encirclement, plus internal demoralization, plus thermonuclear blackmail, lead to progressive surrender."

The forces of external encirclement have diminished, but those promoting demoralization are rampant and raging. Moral decadence provides nourishment for the growth of the Communist menace. As the Bible says, "Righteousness exalts a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

TREACHERY AND TRAGEDY IN ANGOLA

While the attention of the world is focused on the tragic events in Bosnia, another war is raging in Angola, Africa. This civil war between anti-Communist UNITA, led by Jonas Savimbi, and the Governing MPLA, which was formerly Marxist-Leninist, has endured for sixteen years, and it has grown in intensity during the past few months.

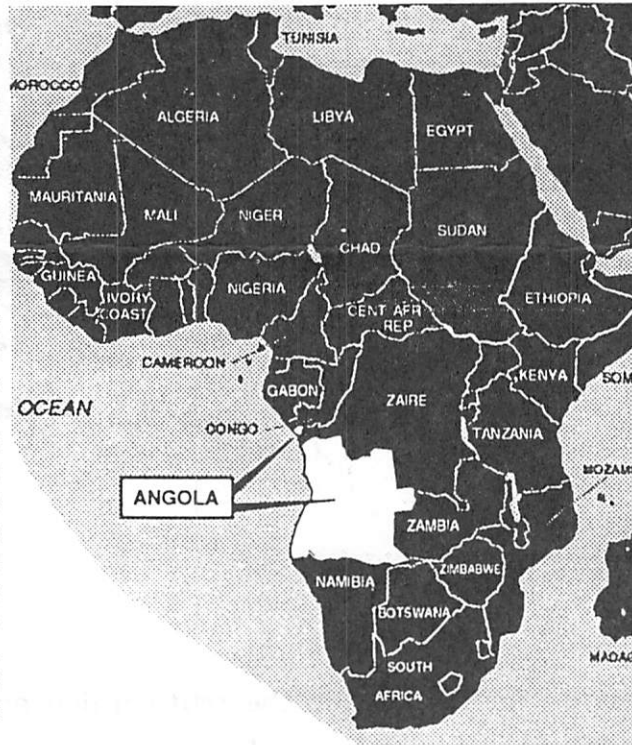

It is difficult to secure up-to-date, unbiased information on recent events in Angola, and the following report by the evangelical Christian organization, "Frontline Fellowship", of South Africa merits serious attention:

More people have been reported killed in the 7 months following the UN supervised general elections in Angola than in the 16 year old civil war that it was supposed to end.

As towns are pounded into rubble by artillery, tank, mortar and rocket bombardments, as lines of refugees flee embattled towns, and as the body count of the dead continues to mount, accusations and attributing of blame fly back and forth. However, despite the prevailing chaos, some seem to have had no problem laying all the blame on the anti-communist UNITA movement and it's veteran resistance leader Dr Jonas Savimbi. But research by members of Frontline Fellowship have found the reality not nearly that simple.

The ruling MPLA government of Angola was installed in power by a Cuban army of occupation in 1975. The MPLA signed a treaty with the Soviet Union in 1976 and proclaimed itself a Marxist-Leninist party in 1977. During the 16 years of Cuban military occupation and MPLA dictatorship many churches were destroyed, over 350 000 people were killed, 80 000 were crippled or mutilated, 500 000 refugees fled to Zaire, Zambia and Namibia, 800 000 internal refugees were displaced and 60 000 orphaned. War damage exceeded $25 Billion. 2 500 Factories were closed down and the national debt rose to over $8 Billion.

Following the successive failures of joint Soviet, Cuban and MPLA military offensives against UNITA held "Free Angola", the MPLA declared itself for multi-party democracy and agreed to a cease-fire. Those sceptical of this apparent conversion from communism were soon disturbed by numerous irregularities in the run up to the first general elections ever scheduled in Angola on 29-30 September 1992.

1). Firstly the TV, radio and print media remained firmly controlled and monopolised by the MPLA throughout the 2 year election process.

2). The late initiation and abrupt premature cut-off of voter registration in rural areas known to be heavily supportive of UNITA prevented the registration of 700 000 potential voters. (The guarantors of the Estoril Accords, the USA, Russia and Portugal, actually protested this - but the registration time was not extended and these potentially pro-UNITA votes were lost.)

3). While the Angolan police ranks doubled in size from 22 000 members to 45 000 with the incorporation of MPLA soldiers, no UNITA members were incorporated in the police force at any level.

4). The 400 UN observers and several hundred international observers were inadequate to monitor the 5 800 polling stations.

5). The MPLA failed to provide a list of registered voters to the other 17 political parties. This was a violation of the electoral law and affected campaign efforts and the verification / vote counting process.

6). The MPLA failed to inform opposition parties of the creation of 105 additional polling stations. No observers were able to monitor these unknown sites.

7). MPLA members illegally took possession of over 80 ballot boxes and opened them during the counting process.

8). Recurring and mysterious failure of electricity and computer equipment occurred during the counting process.

9). Widespread harassment and intimidation (including unlawful detention, arrest, torture and even murder) of UNITA supporters was reported before, during and after the elections.

10). 15 of the 18 registered political parties protested that the elections were fraudulent and not "free and fair".

The Heritage Foundation, Backgrounder (11/16/92) reported that: "The MPLA is responsible for most of Luanda's carnage. It reportedly distributed thousands of weapons to its cadres, leading to the massacre of thousands of unarmed civilians suspected of being UNITA supporters. Moreover, the MPLA apparently sought to decapitate UNITA by killing its vice president, Jeremias Chitunda and other top UNITA leaders." (Cont'd next page)

ANGOLA continued:

UN sponsored negotiations for a cease-fire turned out to be an ambush. The Vice President of UNITA, Jeremias Chitunda and other UNITA leaders were lured to Luanda under UN assurances of safe passage only to be shot in the back of the head by MPLA security officials. These assassinations were followed by co-ordinated MPLA ground and aerial attacks on UNITA installations and house to house searches for sympathizers and supporters of UNITA. The Free Angola Information Service announced that thousands of civilians were massacred in this pogrom.

In the presidential vote, MPLA candidate Dos Santos won 49.6% of the vote, Savimbi obtained 40.1%. The UN noted the "irregularities" in the electoral process but nonetheless certified the Angolan elections "generally free and fair".

Despite initial MPLA successes, most observers agree that UNITA now controls about 70% of the countryside and a large number of provincial capitals and smaller towns. This highlights another inconsistency in most reports. How does UNITA manage to control most of Angola? Considering that UNITA no longer receives any aid from its previous sponsors, the USA and South Africa, and considering the vast amount of stockpiled weaponry supplied by the Soviet Union to the MPLA from 1975-1991, where is UNITA's support base? It is hard to avoid the conclusion that UNITA continues to survive because it enjoys widespread popular support in Angola.

THE TRIUMPH OF MISOGYNY

(Websters Dictionary defines MISOGYNY as "Hatred of women")

I remember the perplexed tone in which my six-year-old daughter, after over-hearing a radio broadcast concerning a vicious attack upon a woman, asked the question: "Why do men hurt ladies? Do they hate them?" I also remember my difficulty in providing a satisfactory answer for a six-year-old.

That little girl is now a prominent psychiatrist in Australia, and has had to grapple many times with the problem that perplexed her mind while a child.

The announcement that the current administration has now mandated that women shall be exposed to the dangers of armed conflict, resurrects my daughter's question. Women have now been made subject to mutilation, capture, agony, torture and rape. Why?

The standard answer, "to end discrimination", is inadequate. In some areas, God and nature discriminate. Women are the bearers, and the primary nurturers, of children. Are we now to anticipate that a quota of beds in every maternity ward must be reserved for men?

At best, armed conflict is the lesser of two evils. Two wrongs don't make a right. The fact that men must suffer the agonies of war does not demand that women must be made to suffer them also.

The legislation to permit--in practice, mandate--women in armed conflict discriminates against women and the family.

GO THOU AND DO LIKEWISE

One of the primary reasons for producing and publishing the Crusade newsletter is to provide accurate, up-to-date information and analysis which will enable readers to teach others. One effective method of teaching is to write informative and challenging letters to the President, Government leaders, legislators, and the news media.

The following letter, which a reader wrote to the local TV station, in reaction to a television program, is a splendid example of what can, and should, be done:

KSNW-TV 3
833 N. Main
Wichita, KS 67203

Dear Sirs:

My husband and I were very disturbed by your program of February 28 on Wichita homosexuals attending church.

We do not know if this is part of a series which might address other, negative aspects of homosexuality; however, these negatives MUST be addressed if a fair and truthful representation of the homosexual life is to be given.

As parents, we have been particularly concerned with the schools and the media presenting homosexuality as a mere "sexual preference", totally acceptable as a "choice" alternative. We feel that, just as the negative repercussions from heterosexual activity are dealt with (STD's AIDS, pregnancy, emotional and psychological depression, etc.), the negative repercussions from homosexuality MUST be dealt with.

The truth is that the homosexual act in and of itself is PHYSICALLY DAMAGING to the "female" partner. The rectum and anus were simply not anatomically designed to have matter shoved into them. It is well known that being subjected to repeated forced penetration of the partner's sex organ into the rectum causes tears and fissures, and frequently over time causes extensive damage to the muscle tissues of the rectum resulting in total loss of rectal control.

This anatomical fact of the rectal tearing and damage is the reason why there is such a tremendously disproportionate occurrence of disease among homosexuals--it allows diseases to be passed from the body fluids of one partner directly into the bloodstream and intestinal tract of the other partner. Homosexuals have the dubious honor of hosting a vastly greater percentage of sufferers from hepatitis, syphilis and other STD's, and all sorts of bowel disorders. This is so prevalent that chronic diarrhea and lack of bowel control has earned the designation among homosexuals as "Gay bowel syndrome".

This direct deposit of diseased fluids into the bloodstream is also the obvious causative factor in the overwhelming percentage of AIDS carriers falling into the homosexual category. Studies have also shown that even disregarding AIDS, over 75% of the "female" partners suffer from immunodeficiency disorders because of the constant exposure of their bloodstream to inappropriate body fluids.

When the homosexual act causes such severe physical damage and exposes its participants to such terrible disease risk factors, why aren't young people, in particular, taught to be aware of these facts and to "just say No"?

It is also not compassionate to young people to tell them, as I have seen in sex education materials directed at them, that they should try various sexual activities, including the homosexual act, and "choose" the one or ones they prefer.

Likewise, it is not compassionate to tell those, who feel drawn to homosexual activity, that this is perfectly acceptable for the simple reason that the activity in and of itself is physically damaging and will additionally expose them to a lifetime of disease and early death. (Studies of over 5,000 obituaries listed in homosexual publications indicated an average death age of 38 for those who died of AIDS, and an average death age of 41--only three years older--for those dying of other causes. This is the result of a lifetime of exposure to severe and repeated health problems.)

If Channel 3 did a news program on alcoholics, would you show practicing alcoholics in church to try to create the impression to the public--young people who are watching as well as adults--that alcoholism is a perfectly acceptable lifestyle choice? Those enslaved to the homosexual lifestyle, like those enslaved to alcohol, pay a terrible personal price. Society--you and me--also pay the price for their behavior in terms of our soaring medical expenses and insurance rates, as well as the damage to families and friends who suffer along with them.

Sincerely,

Karen M. (Mrs. Rick J.) Bruce

PSYCHIATRIC ABUSE IN CUBA

When the Soviet Union was at the peak of its power, it was expelled from the World Psychiatric Association because it classified dissidents as mentally deranged and forced them to undergo cruel psychiatric treatment.

Cuba, the disciple of the former Soviet Union, is still forcing dissidents to undergo cruel psychiatric treatment. In the June edition of FREEDOM REVIEW, which is published by Freedom House, Armando J. Lago reports that Cuban dissidents, who were interned by State Security in Havana Psychiatric Hospital, received treatment which was forcibly administered by a Cuban State Security official, named Mederos, who posed as a nurse aid and who was assisted by four criminally insane patients. This treatment consisted of high doses of psychotropic drugs and electroshocks, and it was given either during interrogation or as a punishment for anti-government actions and attitudes.

The report concludes:

"A Miami Herald editorial and a resolution from the Florida House of Representatives, both have requested an investigation of the charges against Mederos and of the Cuban psychiatric abuse practices. The request was met with foot-dragging by the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the Justice Department." (Page 27)

(The address of Freedom Review is 120 Wall Street, New York, N.Y. 10005)

The unnatural and disease-generating activities of the so-called "gays" in the sewers of the human body, the anus and rectum, are relatively unknown because decent people are reluctant to speak to other decent people about indecent things.

LEARNING MORE ABOUT THE AIDS VIRUS

"Does a tree, falling in the forest, make a noise when no one is there to hear it?" This is one of the questions which have perplexed the philosophers for millenia.

It is a human tendency to believe that, for all practical purposes, the world consists of things which impact upon our physical senses. The truth is that what has been scientifically discovered is only a minute portion of physical reality. As the great scientist, Sir Isaac Newton, said, shortly before his death, "I know not what I may have appeared to the world, but to myself I seem to have been only like a boy playing on the sea-shore, and diverting myself in now and then finding a smoother pebble or a prettier shell than ordinary, whilst the great ocean of truth lay all undiscovered before me."

I am not a molecular scientist, and I accept the verdict of the vast majority of the scientific community that HIV is the major cause of the AIDS disease, though I acknowledge, however, that an unknown co-factor may also be involved.

New discoveries about HIV are constantly being made. Recent research has revealed that more virus is present in those infected than was previously known, and the consequence of this is discussed in an article in the April 16 edition of SCIENCE magazine. Here are extracts:

"Among the many puzzles AIDS presents to medical research, one stands out as particularly critical: The immune system collapses despite the fact that infected people often appear to have only minute amounts of HIV in their blood. That conundrum has bedeviled researchers and even led some iconoclasts, such as virologist Peter Duesberg of the University of California, Berkeley, to suggest HIV isn't the cause of AIDS..."

"Using creative new techniques for detecting virus that are much more sensitive than previous methods, several scientists have found that there is far more HIV in infected people than was previously thought. Not only do those findings help to put another nail in the coffin of Duesberg's anti-HIV hypothesis, they are also helping to elucidate how the virus undoes its hosts."

"Where older techniques found HIV in as few as 1 in 10,000 blood cells, Wolinsky says his group can routinely find HIV genetic material in as many as 1 in 10 blood cells..."

The article finishes on a positive note:

"A clearer picture is finally emerging of how much HIV there is in the bodies of infected people and where most of it resides. And that means researchers are finally getting a firmer handle on the chain of events that is set in motion by the stealthy entrance of HIV." (Science, April 16, 1993)
